Province Welfare Bum: Young

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The no-punches-pulled onslaught occupied the closing minutes of Young's formal address at the inaugural city council meeting of 1977.

By contrast with the remainder of his speech, which was the usual recitation of policies and objectives, coupled with thanks to retiring aldermen and others, it amounted to an abusive tirade.

Young accused the government of:

—"Severely dislocating" the city's economy by "gross over-development" of office space, which has saddled the private sector with an estimated 400,000 square feet of unrented space;

—Being largely responsible for the present 10 per cent unemployment rate in Victoria, by first aggressively expanding the civil service and then cutting back on hirings;

—A combination of policies which have "crippled" the city's tourist industry overnight;

—And persistently refusing to pay its fair share of property taxes on provincial holdings in Victoria, which he said results in a loss to the city of up to $1.4 million a year.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, asked today about Young's scathing attack, commented:

"It's par for the course for Victoria mayors to attack the provincial government."

Curtis said he does not want to comment further on Young's speech until he reads it himself.

Young began by saying he was aware of the risks in "biting the hand that feeds."

"But when that hand is slowly starving you to death

SWEEPING PROPOSAL

Litter offenders in the city of Victoria may find themselves sentenced to cleaning the streets, if a suggestion aired by Mayor Mike Young on Tuesday is adopted by city council.

To curb the litter problem, Young proposed a bylaw with a "substantial fiscal penalty" which also offers offenders the alternative of spending "two or three hours with a broom cleaning up our city streets."

Young added: "This would provide a strong deterrent factor and yet provide a penalty that was within the means of all to pay, one way or the other."

In his address at council's inaugural meeting, the mayor also suggested that council reconsider its present refuse burning bylaw.

"Conditions in certain areas of the city this fall, caused by the prolonged atmospheric thermal inversion, created a very unpleasant environment and this could be substantially remedied by reducing the number of burning days to not more than four per week," he said.

Make-Work Jobs Made Permanent

By JULIET O'NEILL
Canadian Press

OTTAWA — Manpower officials say job creation programs are taking a turn for permanency that reflects government pessimism about unemployment.

As the year begins, more than 700,000 Canadians, including about 90,000 in B.C., are out of work and senior manpower policy planners say they do not expect that to change markedly.

"What we're saying now is that things are not going to get very good very quickly, so we have to get something a little more solid going," Jack Manion, associate deputy minister for manpower, said in an interview.

The department regards as more solid than in the past its five-year plan to create year-round make-work programs and to use money saved from changes in the unemployment insurance plan for employment experiments. In addition, the department is reuniting its manpower and unemployment insurance offices, staff and administration.

One proposed unemployment insurance fund experiment is a work-sharing program where companies would reduce the work week to split available work among all employees rather than lay off some of them when production must be cut back.

The government would compensate the employee for reduced wages with unemployment insurance payments.

"In theory everybody gains but in practice everybody is cautious," Manion said of the business community's response to the proposal so far.

Duncan Campbell, head of manpower's strategic planning and research division, said work-sharing funds would not be meant for seasonal layoffs that are predictable but for "temporary economic downturns."

Most of the manpower department's budget to counter unemployment will go into makework programs, as it has in the past. Three-quarters of the $358 million to be spent in 1977 will go into four make-work proghams, one of them to replace the Local Initiatives Program a winter job program that cost $200 million this winter.

The major new job program is Canada Works, under which established organizations, partnerships or corporations can get up to $180,000 a year to create new jobs in areas with high seasonal or reigonal jobless rates.

GALLUP POLL PUTS TORIES 14% AHEAD

TORONTO (CP) — The latest Gallup poll shows the federal Progressive Conservative party 14 percentage points ahead of the Liberal party in popular support.

The poll, taken last month, gives the Conservative party 47 per cent of popular support compared with 33 per cent for Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberals. The New Democratic party has 16 per cent and others have four per cent.

Undecided voters, 35 per cent, were eliminated in making the calculations.

The poll was conducted through personal interviews with 1,053 persons in the first week of December.

Sixth Tanker Crisis On U.S. East Coast

Times News Services

Barge crews today pumped millions of gallons of oil from the grounded Liberian tanker Universe Leader in an effort to refloat the vessel and keep its 21-million-gallon cargo from polluting the Delaware River.

It was the sixth Liberian flag tanker accident in or near U.S. waters since mid-December. The 824-foot ship went aground Tuesday night trying to avoid a collision with another vessel.

The U.S. coast guard said no oil was spilled as crews worked to pump enough oil out of the tanker so it could be refloated at high tide.

Out in the Atlantic, another oil tanker saga was unfolding as coast guard aircraft resumed a search for the 642-foot Panamanian tanker Grand Zenith, missing off New England for six days with a crew of 38 and a cargo of 8.2 million gallons of industrial fuel oil.

In the Delaware River grounding, the Universe Leader was stuck in the mud about 20 miles down river from Marcus Hook where another Liberian-registered tanker, the Olympic Games, ran aground Dec. 27 and spilled 133,500 gallons of oil.

Meanwhile, New York state has filed a $10.3-million claim against the owners of an oil barge that spilled more than 300,000 gallons of oil into the St. Lawrence River last June.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court here Tuesday, charges the Oswego Barge Corp. with negligence, trespass, creating a public nuisance and violating environmental-conservation laws.

Meanwhile, a Seattle pilot who took a liquefied gas tanker into Rosario Strait in darkness contrary to regulations faces a civil action from the U.S. Coast Guard in Seattle.

The decision to launch a civil case against Dewery Soriano, of Seattle, results from an investigation of the incident by the 13th Coast Guard district.

A spokesman said today the maximum penalty for Soriano's action is $10,000.

BRAZIL COFFEE PROFITS SOAR

Times News Services

Brazilian coffee growers earned record profits last year and apparently are unconcerned over North American attempts to fight high prices with a boycott.

Sources reported Tuesday the year's gross sales will be in excess of $2.3 billion, more than double the $900 million gross export sales of 1975 and $1 billion more than Brazil's previous record of $1.243 billion in 1973.

Meanwhile, New York congressman Fred Richmond, interviewed Tuesday night on a Public Broadcasting Service program said that certain Latin American countries, including Brazil, have taken advantage of natural disasters to impose unfair export taxes ranging upwards of 80 cents a pound on their coffee.

Richmond, a member of the House of Representatives agriculture committee, said the export taxes were supposed to help growers hard hit by frost in Brazil, and earthquakes and floods in other parts of Latin America.

But he doubted whether the growers were receiving full benefit from the taxes.

Richmond's assertion that some countries are co-operating in pushing up prices was disputed by George Boecklin of the National Coffee Association.

"I know of no instance where coffee-growing countries are conspiring together on prices," he said.

Boecklin said the situation was caused by a supply shortage.

DAM BEEF BY CANCEL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., 81-per-cent owned by the British Columbia government, has filed an appeal against last month's decision to build the Revelstoke dam.

Provincial water rights controller Howard deBeck on Dec. 3 granted the application of crown-owned B.C. Hydro for a water licence to build a $1.2 billion Hydro electric project near Revelstoke.

Roy Murphy, a Canadian Cellulose spokesman, said Tuesday the company is appealing the granting of this licence for several reasons, including loss of forest land and possible problems with log transportation.

The water rights branch in Victoria said appeals have been received from Canadian Cellulose and the B.C. Wildlife Federation.

Murphy said the Canadian Cellulose appeal was filed Dec. 21.

Ottawa Pours Cold Water On Coast Guard Sauna Claim

A Coast Guard spokesman in Ottawa today denied a Campbell River man's charge that search and rescue funds have been used to build a sauna and gymnasium in an Ottawa ministry of transport building.

The spokesman said he is "not aware" of the alleged project and added the MOT does not own its office building but rents space.

The denial came after Dr. Robert Somerville said in an interview he had heard "by way of the grapevine" the cash had been funnelled off to build the facilities in an MOT building which houses the coast guard division.

The money Somerville was referring to is the $30 to $40 million recently announced by Ottawa to beef up search and rescue facilities on the east and west coast.

Somerville, a coast guard agent, said today facilities on the west coast are a "first-class mess."

For that reason, and because he has been ignored by Prime Minister Trudeau and other cabinet ministers, he is launching a last-ditch campaign to elicit public support.

He said he has fired off letters to the House of Commons outlining the expenditure of money on the sauna and gymnasium as well as the needs on the west coast.

He is also asking all boat owners in B.C. and all those who have been rescued to write their MPs, demanding more money and better rescue equipment and facilities.

Somerville said it is time "to get people off their butts" and make them realize how they are being shafted in terms of transportation and coast guard facilities.

As one example, he said that Ottawa has agreed, as part of the recent increase in funds, to put two more helicopters on the east coast.

These are expensive machines to run and they will eat up a large portion of the $30 or $40 million that is allotted he said.

What infuriates rescue people in B.C., he added, is that B.C. won't get another helicopter for another two years or more.

Asked why he feels the Trudeau government has so far ignored pleas for more help, he said it is because the Liberals know they are in trouble.

"Therefore they just don't give a damn about the west coast. They are going to go where the votes are, to the east coast."

Somerville said statistics do not back up the attention east coast search and rescue facilities get from Ottawa in comparison with the assistance given the west coast.

There were 2,335 marine incidents handled out of Victoria last year but only 831 out of Halifax, he said.

UNIONS DEMAND NORTHLAND AID

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Pacific Coast Maritime Council of Unions has sent a telegram to Prime Minister Trudeau demanding that the federal subsidy to Northland Navigation be re-instituted and that Federal Transport Minister Otto Lang be fired.

Council secretary-treasurer Tom McGrath said Tuesday that the telegram says Lang's decision to have a commission look into West Coast shipping is a sham and a hoax. The commission would be meaningless and a waste of money, he added.

"Why would you have a commission to prove you're wrong, and if you prove the government wrong what recourse have the people in the coastal communities against the government through lack of service to June or July when a commission may possibly have an answer?" asked McGrath.

He said the council has no intention of appearing before the commission unless the subsidy to Northland is re-instituted.

Among the members of the council are the International Woodworkers of America, the major forest union in B.C., the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the Seafarers International Union of Canada.

Halt Realty Profiteering—Alderman

Oak Bay alderman Doug Watts today said he will seek provincial legislation to prevent real estate agents from buying and selling houses for their own profit.

He said during periods of real estate boom there are numerous reports of agents using inside information to buy up bargain houses and selling them for a big profit within a few weeks.

Watts said bargains in the real estate market should be available to everyone and not just to people in the industry.

"The duty of an agent is to get the best price for your property. If you offer the property at the bargain price of $50,000 and he buys it and resells it weeks later for $55,000, he has not acted faithfully as your agent."

Rather than buy the property, the agent should advise the client the house is being offered at too low a price, Watts said.

There is not much buying by agents at the moment but only because the market is slow, Watts said.

"Now is the time to bring in some restriction so it can be applied during the next boom. Any bargain should be available to all purchasers."

He said he wants to collect information on restrictions in other countries—"I have heard that this type of buying by agents is not permitted in Australia"—and will also look into regulations governing agents in other occupations, such as stock brokerage offices.

Watts said he will seek a complete ban on any type of speculative purchase by real estate agents in British Columbia.

At present, any member of the real estate industry can buy and sell on his own behalf although when he makes his offer he is required to state that he is the buyer. He is also required to state the reason he is buying the property.

(Stock brokers can buy shares using their inside information, if they have any, but if there are two identical bids for one block of shares, one by a broker and one by a member of the public, the public offer takes precedence and the broker must wait for another block of shares to become available at that price or offer a higher price.)

Divine Mission to Expose Spy Ring, King Believed

OTTAWA (CP) — Mackenzie King convinced himself as prime minister 30 years ago that he had been divinely appointed to expose an Ottawa-based Soviet spy ring and thereby help the world toward an era of international brotherhood.

That belief is expressed repeatedly in the 1946 personal diaries of the late prime minister, 1,173 pages of typescript released to the general public for the first time Tuesday by the Public Archives of Canada.

"I have been somehow singled out as an instrument on the part of unseen forces to bring about the exposure that has now taken place," the late Canadian leader told his daily diary after official disclosure of the spy case that helped start decades of East-West hostility.

King, prime minister for more than 21 years between 1921 and his death in 1950, added in a diary entry for Feb. 16, 1946, that exposing the international spy ring and showing the Soviet masses how they are ruled by a few might bring about "a real brotherhood among the common people of the earth."

"To help towards that end is unquestionably my mission and the thing for which I was born."

In fact, the first public disclosure of the Ottawa-based spy ring was made in the United States by broadcaster Drew Pearson that Feb. 4 — five full months after coding clerk Igor Gouzenko defected from the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa and gave incredulous authorities names and details concerning years of espionage in Canada, the United States and Britain.

King, who had hoped his government could "clean up the situation itself" without disclosing the spy-ring affair, believed that the Drew Pearson scoop had been leaked intentionally by the U.S. state department to expose the Soviet duplicity to the world.

King had been skeptical at first, disbelieving Gouzenko, and cautious about affronting Russia.

Even five months later, after the U.S. disclosure, King took a cautious 10 days to issue a public statement which made no mention of Russians. He called in Soviet embassy representatives beforehand to tell them what he was doing.

But King's attitude as revealed in his dairies shifted to the idea that he had been destined by other-worldly powers to orchestrate this shock to world politics.

He had fretted that Russia might react in anger, that Canada would become an atomic battleground, or at least break up as its regions sought closer ties with the U.S. for protection.

Another passage of his diaries reveals that King dined with the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace after encountering the ghosts of his dead family on the same day in London 30 years ago.

The entry for May 30 underlined King's capacity to skip from important public matters to his secret life as a spiritualist. He recounted sitting at dinner between King George VI and British Prime Minister Clement Attlee, with Winston Churchill one seat away, discussing American-Soviet relations.

Earlier that day he wrote of a seance with a Mrs. Hughes in which his dead mother, father, brother, sister and great-grandmother sent messages.

Bickering and tension within the cabinet, fears of runaway inflatin and hostility in the provinces over tax sharing made life miserable for King during the early months of 1946.

King faced many of the economic and political problems 30 years ago that currently trouble his Liberal descendant, Pierre Trudeau.

The diaries recorded King's fears of a repeat of soaring inflation and the depression of the 1930s as the country gradually freed itself of wartime wage and price controls.

Within his own cabinet, one minister after another told King he wanted to quit. However, King managed to hold the cabinet together and attributed the flaring tempers to post-war weariness.

When a 1946 federal-provincial conference failed, King focussed his displeasure on Premiers George Drew of Ontario and Maurice Duplessis of Quebec.

He wrote that Drew made a "cheap politician's stage play" of the proceedings.

King accused Duplessis of duplicity because of his "demogogic platitudes," but had a more favorable opinion of Saskatchewan Premier T. C. Douglas — "very sensible and helpful."

King had trouble maintaining peace within his cabinet. He talked Justice Minister Louis St. Laurent, later prime minister, out of quitting and returning to private life and convinced Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley to put off his retirement.

The British government aroused jealousies in the King cabinet by offering to bestow special honors upon St. Laurent and Ilsley, members of the imperial Privy Council, for their wartime work.

Supply and Reconstruction Minister C. D. Howe complained to King, saying he had even told his family he was to receive the special honor and wanted to leave.

King likened Adolf Hitler to Joan of Arc in 1938, but eight years later the Nazi dictator reminded King of the Frankenstein monster.

The prime minister said he was fascinated by visiting the bloodstained underground bunker in Berlin where Hitler is believed to have committed suicide.

King came home with two souvenirs, a piece of plaster which he pried off the bunker wall and a tile from Hitler's bathroom which someone gave him.

The 1938 visit came near the peak of King's obsession with spiritualism. He told his diary of being divinely guided to act as a peacemaker.

After the 1938 meeting he was convinced that Hitler, too, was a spiritualist because both men were devoted to their mothers.

Only 3½ years of diaries remain to be published. Under a rule to release them 30 years after they were written, the diaries will be made public a year at a time to 1981.

But undisclosed volumes of material on spiritualism, including records of many seances, have been withheld until the year 2001.

Firemen Talks Continue

Further meetings were held today with mediator Clark Gilmour in an effort to resolve a dispute over wages between Victoria and its firemen.

The firemen, who threatened last month to go out on strike Jan. 1, Monday presented the city with their interpretation of an amendment to the Anti-Inflation Board guidelines.

The city responded to that interpretation at today's meeting with Gilmour.

there comes a moment when biting deeply provides satisfaction, if not sustenance," he added.

"Over the past few years we have heard much about corporate welfare bums, but by far the largest welfare bum in Victoria is our provincial government. I can think of no provincial capital in Canada that has received fewer benefits from its provincial administration, nor any city or town in British Columbia that has had less assistance in any respect than the city of Victoria . . ."

The mayor claimed that the "indiscriminate enlargement" of the civil service between 1972 and 1974, together with lavish wage increases for provincial employees, had "dramatically" increased operating costs for municipal government and private business.

He noted that the previous Social Credit government's development of a large, modern ferry fleet in the 1960s had stimulated heavy private investment in the tourist industry, making it one of the mainstays of Victoria's economy.

"Then in the past three years through uncertainty of regular service during the summer months due to ferry worker disputes, the doubleing of rates last year, and the escalation of costs by permitting the highest wage scales in Canada, our tourist industry has been crippled overnight.

"By these same actions our province has triggered an explosive increase in property values both residential and commercial which, coupled with the consequent increment in the cost of living, the raising of sales tax to seven fusal to eliminate succession per cent and the persistent reduties, has systematically wrecked Victoria as the No. 1 retirement centre in Canada."

Good Start On Blood At Sidney

The first Red Cross blood clinic of the New Year on Vancouver Island, at Sidney's Sansha Hall on Tuesday, was supported by 164 donors.

"It wasn't a record by any means but it's got us off to a pretty good start," a spokesman said today.

Today the clinic was at the Hudson's Bay retail store, Thursday it will be aboard HMCS Provider for fleet personnel and Friday the location is Mount Douglas high school.

VANCOUVER POLICE APPEAL PAY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Police Union will appeal the Anti-Inflation Board rollback to eight per cent of pay increases to the city's 944 policemen.

Union president Mike Flynn said the policemen had settled for 10.08 per cent in wages and fringe benefits and there was no justification for the rollback.

The union voted Tuesday night 100 per cent to appeal the ruling.

Police were retroactively paid 7.5 per cent of the increase pending the AIB ruling. Flynn said both wages and fringe benefits would have to be cut back because of the rollback.

The AIB noted that Vancouver's police force is among the highest paid in the country but Flynn said other settlements in B.C. have exceeded guidelines and policemen needed the above-guideline settlement because of the high cost of living in Vancouver.

Dollar Near Par

The Canadian dollar today came within an eyelash of returning to par with the U.S. currency for the first time since the election of the Parti Quebecois government in Quebec.

A senior Canadian foreign exchange dealer reported a sale of U.S. dollars today at 1.001, or within one-tenth of a cent of par.

The sale in New York pushed the Canadian dollar up to 99.9 cents, its highest point since the October slump.

The Canadian dollar had been selling above $1.02 prior to the Quebec election but fell six cents to just above 96 cents within two weeks.

The rise results from Quebec's decision to borrow $215 million at 6.5 per cent interest in American dollars to help pay the Olympic deficit.

Word of this loan strengthened the Canadian dollar and it could go above par if other loans are confirmed.

The $215 million will have to be converted to Canadian cash and once the bidding starts the value of the Canadian dollar will rise.

There are also reports of further loans by Quebec which could push the dollar up further.

In Victoria today the Royal Bank of Canada was buying U.S. dollars at .9960 and selling them at 1.0120. The spread is the normal amount for handling charges.

The U.S. dollar was worth a peak of $1.03 against the Canadian dollar in November but has drifted down. Ten days ago it flattened out at 1.0088.

The price was fluctuating in the range of 1.0010 and 1.0026 in trading on world money markets up to 11 a.m. Victoria time.

Canadian interest rates have declined during the past 30 days but are still higher than those available in New York and some European nations.

The prime rate in Canada is 9.25 per cent or 2.75 above the rate at which Quebec will borrow its $215 million. Unless Canadian interest rates are reduced further, foreign borrowings will continue to exert upward pressure on the dollar.

RULING RAPPED OVER PREGNANCY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Service, Office and Retail Workers Union and member Stella Bliss will appear before an Unemployment Insurance Commission hearing Monday to challenge regulations the union says poses a hardship to pregnant working women.

Union President Pat Barter said Tuesday that UIC regulations state that in order to qualify for maternity benefits a woman must have been working or receiving benefits at the time she becomes pregnant.

"Then the act goes on to say that if a pregnant woman fails to meet this criteria and does not qualify for maternity benefits she also is ineligible for regular benefits if she loses her job," said Ms. Barter.

She said the regulations which deny a worker UIC benefits although she has worked the eight-week qualifying period discriminate between pregnant women and all other working women and the Supreme Court of Canada has ruled that discrimination between members of the same class is illegal under the Bill of Rights.

Ms. Bliss, an employee of Brown Bros. Ford Sales from September, 1975 to March, 1976, was fired four days before her child was born. Because she was unemployed at the time of conception she was denied maternity benefits and her application for regular benefits was rejected.

She said she is not seeking compensation for the period when benefits were denied but is attempting to change the law.

Two Charged in Subway Attack

TORONTO (CP) — Two youths have been charged in the beating of a 61-year-old man who tried to stop a racially-inspired attack on two Toronto subway passengers New Year's Eve.

Police said Tuesday that Robert George Cranston, 16, and a 15-year-old juvenile, both of Toronto, were charged with assault causing bodily harm in the beating of Fred Carson.

Carson, who said he was punched and kicked by several youths when he tried to stop an attack on two men who appeared to be Pakistanis, suffered a broken nose and other injuries.

The incident was one of two racial attacks reported New Year's Eve when free rides were offered on the Toronto Transit Commission TTC system.

TTC chairman Gordon Hurlburt blamed the free rides, paid for by a distillery, for much of the trouble.

"I'm against the free ride because I was on the subway in 1974 on New Year's Eve and my wife and I couldn't get up the stairs at Davisville station because of all the broken beer bottles and people being sick."

Carson, an investigator with the Ontario Ombudsman's office, said a trainman refused to help him.

Trainman Peter Goehle said the reason he did not go to Carson's aid was because he was busy trying to help three Pakistanis being beaten up in another car.

"I had a mob of 20 on my car that I faced," Goehle said. "Did he (Carson) expect me to tackle a mob of 25 or 26 who were all probably high on either alcohol or pot?"

Goehle said he followed standard procedure in reporting the trouble to transit control.

He said his motorman notified the commissions' central control office by radio that the attack was taking place but was ordered to proceed for several stops because security personnel were busy elsewhere.

Mr. Goehle said the control officer told the motorman that security personnel would meet the train at the Queen station, six stops farther along the line.

Mr. Hurlburt said he does not know why the crew was ordered to move the train on while the attack was in progress.

Commission rules require subway crews to pull into the nearest station in the event of an emergency and wait there until help arrives.

Orders Reduced For Kuwait Oil

NICOSIA (AP) — Kuwait's oil minister said Tuesday that buyers of that Arab country's oil have asked for reduced quantities in 1977.

The move was seen as one of the first consequences of last month's split in the pricing system of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates decided to hold their 1977 crude-oil price increase to five per cent while Kuwait and the other OPEC members raise their prices 10 per cent. Some buyers doing business with other OPEC countries are expected to switch to the cheaper Saudi oil.

A radio station in the sheikdom of Qatar, monitored here, quoted Kuwait Oil Minister Abdul-Mutaleb Kazemi as saying he had not yet decided what action to take as a result of the reduced demand.

He said he was particularly concerned with buyers who had already contracted to buy specific quantities, the broadcast said.

"We must not act hastily," Kazemi was quoted as saying.

The broadcast did not identify the foreign buyers who want to reduce their dependence on Kuwaiti oil.

Saudi Arabia has said it will force all OPEC members to adopt the Saudi price levels.

AIB APPROVES GM PRICE HIKE

OTTAWA (CP) — The chairman of the Anti-Inflation Board gave his blessing today to plans by General Motors of Canada Ltd., Oshawa, for a 5.5-per-cent average increase in auto prices.

The increase, effective Jan. 10, comes four months after six-per-cent increases were put into effect in the United States and nearly a year and a half since the last increase in Canada.

The board required GM last August to hold average prices for its 1977 models to 1976 levels to avoid earning excessive profits for 1976. In the four months since then, consumers saved about $80 million from the price holddown, Pepin estimated.

The board has reviewed the proposed increases for this year and decided that they should not produce excess revenue, Pepin said.

Soviet Dissident Seized

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Yuri Orlov, leader of a dissident group set up to monitor Soviet observance of the Helsinki accords, was detained in the street today and taken to a police station for questioning, dissidents said.

They said five men in plainclothes seized Orlov in a Moscow suburb shortly before he was due to address a news conference for Western journalists on police searches Tuesday of five Moscow apartments, including his own.

Tuesday night, while at least two of the searches still were going on, the official Tass news agency said evidence found linking three members of the dissident group to a Paris-based anti-Soviet emigre organization called the People's Labor Alliance.

Orlov, a physicist, denied the allegation, as did Lyudmila Alexeyeva, another dissident whose home was searched.

The group was set up last May to check on whether the Kremlin was carrying out human-rights pledges made at the 1975 European security conference in Helsinki, Finland.

Police continued searching the home of the third member of the group, Alexander Ginzburg, until early this morning.

Dissidents said they feared the searches heralded an all-out effort by authorities to prevent the 12-member group from publicizing alleged violations of the Helsinki accords.

Western periodicals, typewriters and documents on alleged human rights violations in the Soviet Union were confiscated, they added.

3 Western Allies Fear Berlin Border Changes

By MICHAEL GETLER
Washington Post

BONN, West Germany — American, British and French officials met privately here Tuesday to consider the implications of new Communist regulations that could violate existing four-power agreements covering the divided city of Berlin.

Late last week, in an announcement that surprised Western officials, the East German government said that beginning Jan. 1, 1977, all non-Germans for the first time would have to pay a fee and obtain a visa to cross the Berlin Wall from the West for a one-day visit in the Communist eastern sector of that city.

Tuesday, the situation took on added interest for the allies because of reports that the East German government had also removed its security checkpoints from main arteries leading from East Berlin to the rest of East Germany.

This apparent action, coming on the heels of the new visa requirements, suggests to some allied and West German officials that East Germany, backed by Moscow, is now trying a new tack, to force Western acknowledgement that there is no difference between East Berlin and the rest of East Germany.

A visa has been required since 1949 for foreigners who wanted to visit elsewhere in East Germany, other than East Berlin.

East Germany has always claimed that East Berlin is the capital of that country and sought to limit the control of the Western allies solely to West Berlin.

"What they want you to accept with the new visa to East Berlin," said one Western official here, "is that when you enter East Berlin now, you are now entering another country — the German Democratic Republic — and not just the Soviet sector of Berlin.

For all practical purposes, the Western allies have yielded considerable ground over the years on the East Berlin issue.

Spain's Opposition Drops Reds

MADRID (Reuter) — Spanish opposition leaders have avoided a clash with the government by leaving the Communists out of a four-man team that will negotiate a new political amnesty and legalization of all political parties with Premier Adolfo Suarez.

Nine opposition leaders, including Communist party chief Satiago Carrillo, named the first of two negotiating committees after a four hour meeting Tuesday.

The committee is made up of Socialist leader Felipe Gonzales, a liberal, a Basque and a Catalan Christian Democrat.

Suarez had said he will not negotiate with any opposition group that includes a representative of the outlawed Communist party.

Carrillo made his first public appearance at the meeting since he was released on bail from prison last week. He was arrested on Dec. 22 after living underground since his return to Spain from exile last February.

The Communist leader told reporters after the meeting that his party will not give up its right to take part in future negotiations with the government.

At the top of the opposition's list of demands will be the legalization of all political parties and a full amnesty for political prisoners. About 200 political detainess, most of them Basques, were not included in an anmesty granted by King Juan Carlos last July.

The opposition will also press for freedom of expression and the right to air its views on the state-run television and radio networks during election campaigns for a two-house parliament, expected in the spring.

Ottawa Wrestles With Less

Nineteen-hundred and seventy seven will be the most crucial year in the history of the Trudeau administration. National unity heads any list of priorities. Other domestic initiatives will be undertaken with a weather eye to their effects on the delicate federal-provincial balance, exacerbated by endless quarrels over sharing the tax boodle. It is useless to speculate on throne speech or budget at this juncture, but certain problems are self-evident.

Inflation appears to be waking from a brief cat-nap and the jobless rate remains steady at a depressing 7.3 per cent. Added to these familiar ogres, Canada's balance of payments is dismal. Without a major thrust in competitive selling abroad this country faces a bleak economic future. That all these problems reached crisis proportions at the same time is enough to give any federal administration nightmares. A hint at how Ottawa will deal with this full plate is contained in a number of working papers issued by the government. The full title is, The Way Ahead: A Framework For Discussion. It's propaganda, yes, and the framework is gossamer as opposed to steel. But it indicates official thinking.

Inflation is still viewed as the major economic pressure. "The gravest threat to our ability to meet (economic) challenges would lie in our incapacity to arrest inflationary pressures. The 1980s promise to be an environment in which such pressures will be continuously latent." Government's role in the economy is summarized under a heading entitled The Middle Road. While the rationale rejects a minimal role in the economy or a continuously expanding role in the private sector, it manages to leave its options open. While admitting pursuit of social goals can damage the economic fabric, it warns that narrow economic goals can hurt vital social fabric. In the final analysis, stripped of its careful qualifiers, it says: "They (the people who adhere to this middle road) would seek a rationalization and simplification of the vast array of government programs."

Unemployment produces the most straightforward prose in the paper, asking for "new employment policies that increase productive work and reduce all of the appalling costs associated with unemployment." It is both appropriate and desirable to introduce programs of direct job creation, according to the government. Hearkening back to the prime minister's vague allusions to a new society, the paper says it must be recognized that market-directed economic growth has not fully served the social goals and aspirations of Canadians, while at the same time, the anonymous authors express faith in the market system.

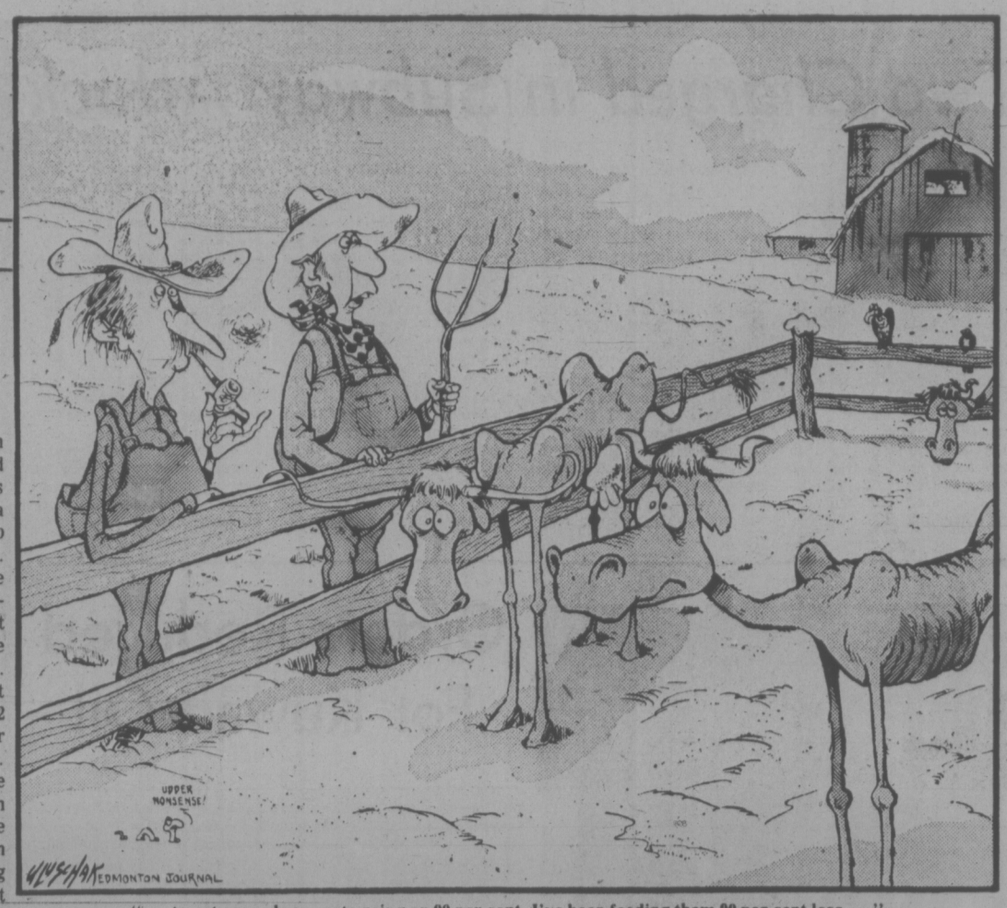
After 21 pages of "on the other hand" discussion the paper summarizes itself: "It is clear, therefore, that principles of fiscal responsibility, less direct intervention, and increased reliance on the market economy demand, for consistency, policies which will both reduce pressures upon governments arising from 'imperfections' of the market economy and which will permit the government's priorities to be served in a less expenditure oriented and interventionist manner." As the paper states earlier, if we want government to do less, we will have to do more for each other. For example, employers must become more responsive to demands for high standards of industrial health and safety while individuals will have to halt rising financial expectations.

From this reluctant wrestling with the country's problems it would appear the throne speech will contain small tax cuts for the corporate and private sector, job creation programs plus some vague plans for a decentralized country, no doubt to steal the Conservative's thunder. Other than these probables, the government continues to dangle alternatives in front of our noses, while it philosophizes about the future. There is nothing wrong with this process. Nor can we criticize the goals. But few Canadians will wade through 32 pages of agonized prose to plumb their country's social and economic future.

This paper contains some grave portents about our economic future in the next decade. For example, we are told that Canada's net dependency on imported oil will increase, but rising resource prices in general could result in inflationary income adjustments in an attempt to offset them. So why did we sell off this precious resource for the last decade? The government, this government, was warned of the consequences of such a policy in the early 1960s. Will we still be wringing our hands about the effects of the last decade's policies 10 years hence in another discussion paper?

Budget and throne speech will detail the government's plans for the short term, but the prime minister should sit down with the country and talk turkey about the potential crises alluded to in this paper. We have all been living in a dream, governments, corporations and individuals. Canada needs a strong will to weather a long winter of economic shortfalls.

Some will find the medicine unbearable, others want a different pharmacist. Whatever the rationale we will eventually have to swallow the purgative, because all the prescriptions will be the same. The label says, "less" — less money, fewer services, and a sense of conservation we lost with prosperity.



"... to get around my costs going up 90 per cent, I've been feeding them 90 per cent less ..."

RICHARD GWYN

In '77 Play Confederation

OTTAWA — In new years past, I've filled this space with forecasts about trends and happenings for the year ahead. My guesses, when I look back on them, turn out to have been no better than half right.

The truth is that there's no way to foresee the future in politics, the future that matters that is, like an Arab oil boycott, or a Parti Quebecois election victory. Former British prime minister Harold Macmillan once was asked what had been the dominant influence during his years in power. "Events," Macmillan replied. Things just happen, he meant, and those in power have to struggle to cope with them.

It's not worth the effort, in other words, to pundit about 1977 before it unfolds. Whatever is going to be, will be, and Trudeau and Clark and Levesque will just have to do the best they can. Better to fill up a long weekend with games.

Perpetual Inactivity

The Bureaucratic Survival Game, for example. Any number can play. It requires neither paper nor pencil only imagination.

Here's the game. All Indians and Inuit, overnight, leave Canada. As deputy minister of Indian affairs and northern development it's your responsibility to keep your department going as long as possible. (Remember that the federal commission set up to look after the survivors of the Halifax Explosion of 1916 extended its existence until 1975.) How long, in five year chunks, could you invent reasons for all Indian and Northern Affairs bureaucrats to remain untouched behind their potted plants?

The record (held of course by a bureaucrat) is 35 years. To stretch out the department's existence to 15 years is easy — five years to discover that all Indians and Inuit had left, five years to complete a policy analysis, complete with alternative options and five years to think what the government should do if all the Indians and Inuit came back again. Can you do better?

Another game, which you can't play yet, but which is worth keeping an eye out for because it will allow you to be premier-for-an-hour, is the Confederation Game. Based upon some of the characteristics of Monopoly and upon some of those of Diplomacy, the Confederation Game is being developed by a Toronto company and should be available within a couple of months.

Assume six players each representing a province except that the Atlantic provinces have been lumped together and so have Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The objective, which is also the essence of Confederation itself, is to finish with the large number of slices of the Canadian pie, grabbing them from your fellow provinces and hoarding them.

As your counter circles the board, it may land on spaces like "Welfare Costs Up, Spend $20 million" or "Government Mismanagement, Lose $10 million." If you are bold, and if you hit the right square, you can shift to a Separation track where you will face such horrors as "Appoint Ambassadors, Spend $25 million" or land on such delights as "Tax Windfall, Gain $20 million."

At their next dinner at 24 Sussex Drive, the premiers and Prime Minister Trudeau, rather than shout at each other across the table, might want to haul out the game to see whether, with luck and bluff and management, Newfoundland and P.E.I., might be able to finish up with more slices of the pie than Alberta.

No more games but with the nightmare that wakens columnists at 3 a.m., space still to be filled. As a precaution against just such a trauma I happen to have in reserve what's known in this trade as a "squib," which means an item worth a couple of paragraphs but not a whole column.

Barney's Brownshirts

A couple of months ago you may recall that I mentioned here that the government was planning to set up some-kind of youth corps in which young people would do outdoor work and which officials had nicknamed "Barney's Brownshirts" after Defence Minister Barney Danson who had originated the idea.

Youth marches on. A document before cabinet proposes the creation of something to be called Operation Canada which would enroll up to 10,000 unemployed young people for a variety of community development and community enhancement (parks, nature trails) jobs. One option suggested in the cabinet paper is that Operation Canada members might wear uniforms and that the organization might be administered by, though not run by, the military.

The scheme, of course, sounds a bit familiar. It amounts to a recreation of the Company of Young Canadians, but cut to the sterner, no-nonsense, cloth of the 1970s as opposed to the more idealistic and more imaginative garments of the 1960s.

W. A. WILSON

The Airlines' Fear of Flying

OTTAWA — The airlines which serve this country are on the point of one more effort through their trade association to resist airport costs which they claim are excessive and unnecessary.

The cost and inconvenience of Mirabel have already created resistance among airline executives to moving from the older Dorval airport near Montreal. Now the prospect of extremely high rental rates in the new Calgary terminal (expected to cost $130 million) has created fresh antagonism between the airlines and the federal ministry of transport.

The way to high costs at the Calgary terminal was opened when the DoT decided that, rather than go on expanding the old terminal which was becoming badly overcrowded, it would build a new one on the opposite side of the airport. This forced the price up since new taxiways, roads, aprons and fueling facilities were required, as well as the new building.

The result has been that airlines serving Calgary are now being asked $30 a square foot for counter space, rising to $39 during the first five years with the prospect that it will reach $55 a square foot by the end of 15 years, viewed as the half-life of the new building.

Cheaper Leases

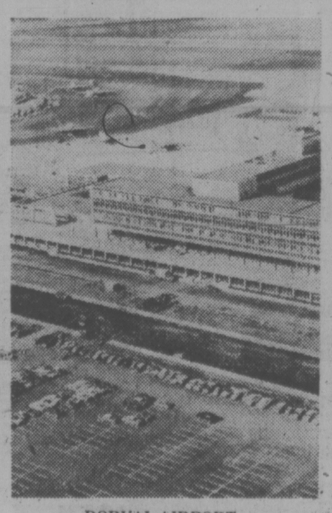
Similar space in the Dorval terminal costs $24.85, according to the Air Transport Association of Canada. At Mirabel it is $30. Toronto's Terminal II, the newest of the two at Malton, was an unpopular terminal but it was, nonetheless, a bargain. Counter space there started at $12 a square foot when the building was opened, rising to about $20 as time goes by, the ATAC says.

The ATAC and some of the affected airlines are trying to organize a common front among the carriers, refusing to move into the new Calgary building until "satisfactory leases" are negotiated. The ATAC's definition of satisfactory is "about what a willing tenant would agree to pay." Airlines are captive rather than willing tenants in airports and in the end have to pay what the operating authority demands.

The effect of high rentals on an airline operation naturally depends upon the number of people being served by a given facility. In 1975, Malton handled 9,706,000 passenger movements — arrivals and departures — and Dorval 7,025,000. Cost of counter space and other rented facilities is, therefore, spread over a large number of people. One reason why the airlines involved are up in arms over the Calgary situation is that in 1975 there were only 2,486,000 passenger movements there.

The present minister of transport, Otto Lang, is one of the few people the airlines are not inclined to blame in this situation which, given the criticism he has faced in the last year over other matters, must be a relief to him. The Calgary development began with Don Jamieson when he was transport minister. Local and parliamentary pressure forced him to agree to new terminal facilities. Expansion of the old facilities and supplementation of them through partial new complexes were alternatives considered and discarded. The decision to move across the airfield was taken with its built-in guarantee of maximum costs.

It is difficult to place responsibility for this on any one of the ministers who had a hand in it because a trend towards ultra-lavish airport facilities was involved.



DORVAL AIRPORT
. . . airlines won't move

Instead of the spartan quality of Toronto's Terminal II, there was a strong preference for very costly, monumental buildings which would not just be places through which travellers could board and leave airplanes but spectacular showplaces as well. Along the way, probably because of the alliteration in the words, they were nicknamed "Marchand Monuments" by the trade.

The upshot involved some impressive figures. Mirabel is believed to have cost, all told, about $500 million although the estimates actually show $372 million. The differences arises from the road building which the federal government aided in other ways. Terminal II remains the exception — $46 million according to airline sources which followed its development closely. But by contrast, the federal government's bill for expropriations and plans at the abortive Pickering, Ont. airport project is usually estimated at about $100 million. The early 1970s were the days of the big spenders in government, when the sky seemed to be the limit.

Airlines resisting the move into the Calgary terminal at the proposed rentals face two major hazards. Their existing leases in the old terminal have 30-day cancellation clauses which the government could invoke in an attempt to force a move. More serious, however, is the problem presented by the Air Canada board of directors. The men who sit on that board, as is the case of other crown corporations, are government appointees being repaid for past political services. There is considerable doubt in airline circles whether such a board would, in the crunch, back its own management in resistance that was embarrassing to the government.

Political Names

One of the problems with the crown corporations has been that they do not in general have distinguished boards of directors. There are two reasons: The system of political rewards involved in the appointments and the lack of real power given the board. Thus the government usually cannot get, and seldom has tried to secure, men of the calibre who sit on the boards of directors of such private sector corporations as, say, Canadian Pacific or the Royal Bank.

The government is currently planning ways of bringing crown corporations under better control but its thinking runs towards political control, which opens the way for some of the worst abuses of interference and patronage which plagued Canadian railways at an earlier period. There appears to have been no thought given to improving the calibre of the boards of directors of the crown corporations and giving them enough power to guide the company's affairs. This may simply represent political realism, an awareness that no matter how good the immediate intentions might be, individual ministers and future governments would insist upon the appointment of favorites.

The ATAC believes the boards of the other airlines affected at Calgary will balk "unless the Air Canada board runs away."

Superficial

I object strongly to the conclusions drawn in the page 15 article Chamber Probe (Dec. 14), and the subsequent editorial entitled "Do As We Say. . ." As a counsellor and teacher in many of the district's public schools, I have been consistently impressed by the efforts of teachers and trustees to upgrade the quality of education in Greater Victoria. These efforts are blocked much more often by the ill-informed, superficial solutions exemplified by your editorial—from opportunists outside the school system — than by inadequacies within.

My own children are benefitting at present from one of the progressive alternatives introduced during the last five years. In contrast to the declining enrollments receiving such publicity, Sundance, South Park and Northridge have extended waiting lists. Obviously this is not because of the strictness of their "discipline" (much-abused word) or their focus on the academic "basics"; what they provide are small-school environments which foster the growth of self-confidence, joy in learning, and social responsiveness. The latter skills seem much more "basic" to me than reading, writing and arithmetic — subjects which can be taught by almost any competent, person to willing, enthusiastic students.

None of the people quoted in your articles mentions the means by which private schools maintain interest and enthusiasm in their students: low pupil-teacher ratios, and loose timetabling which allows more small-group tutorial work. The private schools I have visited function, in fact, more like the open area classrooms you hold up, with so little justification, as positive example.

You do a disservice in your editorial to all those people seriously interested in improving the quality of education, by perpetuating the idea that there are "high school graduates who can't write." That is a complete fabrication, and is supported by another equally illusory argument, that more academic emphasis is necessary. By far the majority of secondary school graduates have had competent academic instruction. What they have lacked is consistent exposure to caring, interested, intellectually alive people in small group settings, with a curriculum flexible enough to meet their individual needs. As a result, they have, in varying degrees, "turned off" the instruction they do receive.

It is responsiveness to our children's needs that I support, in reaction to the ill-informed irresponsibility of the generalizations you perpetrate. If such lack of responsiveness to the basic educational and personal values pushes many parents — teachers and trustees included — to enroll their children in private schools, I can understand why. I am thankful that they are aware enough of the true "basics" in education to insist that their children have them. — Dave Nordstrom, 2660 Mt. Stephen Avenue.

House of Hacks

I am wondering if Senator Perrault truly believes the contents of his letter Woeful on the subject of the Canadian Senate.

The Senate is a non-elected body of old Liberal hacks which has no place in a democracy. Due to the preponderance of Liberals in the Senate that body is of no importance in our so-called democratic system. The same would apply if the Progressive Conservatives fell heirs to a long period of power as they would then pack the Senate with old Conservative hacks.

Even the Canadian Chamber of Commerce made the statement that if the Canadian Bankers' Association had written up the latest proposals for amendments to the Bank Act they could not have written up proposals more favorable to our chartered banks. Surely that is, in itself, an indictment of the Senate banking committee especially as it emanates from a body like the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

It is truly incredible that we have a body in the year 1976 which is non-elected and still is a part of our so-called democratic system of government.

However, I suppose the Liberals and the Conservatives must retain a body where they can retire their old political hacks, and I might add, at the expense of the Canadian taxpayer. When will the taxpayer and voter awaken to this state of affairs?

I often despair. — M. P. R. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

Caouette First to Mobilize Quebec Poor

CAOUETTE . . . jolted a province

By DOMINIQUE CLIFT
Montreal Star

Never has a single individual exerted so much influence on political attitudes and behavior in Quebec as did Real Caouette. His tireless devotion to the cause of Social Credit — otherwise known as Funny Money — has tended to obscure the substantial and positive contribution which he made to political processes in this province. His successes, particularly during the early 1960s, have not only influenced other parties but provincial and federal government activities as well.

Caouette's great feat was in the 1962 general election when his group elected 26 members to the House of Commons. The breakthrough, which later brought on the collapse of the Diefenbaker government, had been totally unexpected by other parties and by the media. It clearly demonstrated the tremendous distance which existed between the rural poor who had voted for Caouette and the institutions which were supposedly monitoring social developments in the province — rival political parties and the press.

What Caouette demonstrated was that the poor, particularly the rural poor, could be mobilized in their own cause without any outside help. He showed that it was possible to break their traditional allegiance to the Liberals and the Conservatives where political discussions tend to be monopolized by the educated and the wealthy. At the time this was a frightening realization, and it seemed to threaten the stability of political institutions.

Not only was Caouette campaigning against the banks, big business and the labor movement, he was successfully questioning the basic assumptions underlying accepted social and fiscal policies. To those who claimed that Social Credit would trigger off uncontrollable inflation, Caouette had a ready reply: "What's inflation to a guy who hasn't a penny to start with?" The effect over the whole province was devastating.

Official concern was so great that a number of people from various fields of activity were dispatched to the Lake St. John area and to Abitibi to campaign against him. Jean Marchand as president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, Eric Kierans as the president of the Montreal Stock Exchange and Rene Levesque as provincial minister of natural resources participated in these efforts to stem the Creditiste movement.

Their efforts were subsequently successful. But Caouette had put the poor on the political map. Governments began to revise their welfare programs and to show an inordinate preoccupation with what was called at the time "social feedback". Public funds began to be spent on organizing the poor and the politically voiceless into citizens' committees so that they could effectively make themselves heard by the authorities.

The manner in which Caouette jolted Quebec society 14 years ago is still being felt today. For example, the requirements that many public institutions such as hospitals and the boards of professional corporations include representatives of the public can be traced to the impact of the Creditiste movement in the early 1960s.

Even Social Credit doctrine, which considers interest on loans as a form of usury and exploitation, was not without lasting effects on Quebec. The repeated attacks which Caouette launched on banks and small loan companies represented the first inkling that stricter consumer protection laws were badly needed in Quebec. Governments moved quickly to correct the credit abuses on which Caouette seemed to thrive and to launch educational campaigns on the management of household budgets.

The way in which Caouette organized and financed the Creditiste movement did not go unnoticed. He demonstrated conclusively that a political party financed by its own membership could become a viable one. He showed that such a party would naturally tend to adopt a strong anti-establishment attitude. This realization greatly stimulated the ruling Liberals into examining the nature and effects of party slush funds on governments and on politics in general.

The example of a true people's party whetted the public appetite for political reforms. The Liberals under Jean Lesage, who had witnessed the abuses of the previous Duplessis regime, were also ready for a change. The result was that Quebec pioneered in North America the use of public funds to finance political campaigns and the limiting of actual election expenditures.

The greatest mystery concerning Real Caouette's political career is how such a gentle and mild-mannered man could have frightened so many people into action. Although he could wield caricature and ridicule with a devastating effect, he was very seldom nasty in his political speeches or in his relations with others. Yet there is no denying that his political campaigns and his successes sowed panic among people in power and among all well-meaning liberal-minded voters.

The answer may well be that the response he got from the rural poor seemed to open a terrifying gulf in Quebec society, one that could alter the whole social fabric. Caouette was threatening to upset the traditional relationship between social classes in the province by mobilizing the poor and attacking the establishment's institutions and ideas.

Caouette himself was not a reformer. In fact he was profundly conservative in most of his views. But his acute perception of popular grievances together with the example which his political activities have set contributed to frightening authories into valid reforms. His was an unusual but extremely favorable contribution to the life of the province.

'Psychiatrists Too Powerful in Courts'

By EDWARD GREENSPAN

(Greenspan is a Toronto lawyer. He wrote this article for The Star)

Psychiatrists are johnny-come-latelies in the criminal justice system. They have entered the courtroom armed with a special language which no one except possibly another psychiatrist really understands. And yet, more and more, lawyers, who have been involved in criminal law for hundreds of years, are utilizing psychiatric evidence to the fullest possible extent.

Psychiatrists have been designated to make difficult decisions on behalf of the public in our courts. They render opinions about the competency of an accused person to stand trial. No one in this country may stand trial unless he is capable of understanding the nature of the charge and is sufficiently able to instruct counsel. On the strength of a psychiatric opinion of unfitness to stand trial, a person may be remanded for an indefinite period until mentally fit to stand trial.

Who is Dangerous?

The law says also that a person who does not appreciate the nature and quality of his act, or does not know that the act is wrong, cannot be convicted of any criminal offence. Even though the insane person is not accountable to the law in one sense, he is kept in stricter custody in Oak Ridges, Penetanguishine, for as long as it requires to "cure" him.

Psychiatrists are also called upon to testify on the question of dangerousness. This normally occurs after an accused is convicted of an offence, and during the important issue of sentencing the offender for his crime. People who are thought to be dangerous are sentenced to longer periods of imprisonment.

Sane Man Held

The case of Ken Chesher of Niagara Falls is a striking example of this third area of psychiatric testimony. Ken Chesher pleaded guilty to the offence of firing a gun with the intent to endanger life. According to the evidence, he went looking for his 15-year-old daughter who had not returned home and was apparently involved with people who have criminal records.

Chesher took the gun because he as afraid that the people who were detaining his child would be carrying knives and would use them against him. In fact, according to him, when he found these people, they drew their knives and Chesher had to shoot his gun into the air.

A psychiatrist was called and testified that he was concerned about the dangerousness or the potential dangerousness of Cheshir's condition. On the strength of that statement Chesher, a sane man, began his 5½-month journey through the horrors of involuntary hospitalization.

The extraordinary influence psychiatrists exert in the determination of who shall be involuntarily hospitalized is disturbing. Judges usually defer to the judgments and recommendations of psychiatrists on the question of dangerousness.

There is no doubt that, on the whole, psychiatrists are highly trained, honest and intelligent people who render their opinions based upon a careful mental examination of each person. The important question is whether they are equal to the task of predicting dangerousness.

No Training

There is no empirical support for the belief that psychiatrists can predict dangerous behaviour. One study indicates that 60 to 70 per cent of the people whom psychiatrists judge to be dangerous may, in fact, be harmless. Psychiatrists receive no training on the prediction of "dangerousness;" medical schools do not offer courses on it, nor do their textbooks explain how such assessments should be made. Even if psychiatrists could accurately determine who is mentally ill, it would not assist them in predicting dangerousness.

But in Canada, day after day, people are sent to psychiatric facilities for up to 60 days for assessment on the strength of one psychiatrist's "expert" opinion. As Chesher discovered, a single psychiatrist also has the power to certify that a patient is "mentally ill" and in need of further treatment. This extraordinary power is given to psychiatrists because legislators assume that psychiatrists are "uniquely qualified" to determine when an individual requires hospitalization. As a result, citizens of this country can be detained indefinitely by these psychiatrists — the same "experts" who made a horrible mistake in Chesher's case.

Psychiatric opinions (like any other individual's opinions) are often affected by personal biases and idiosyncracies as well as by the psychiatrist's training and the timing of the examination.

Depends on Setting

Diagnosis is often influenced as well by the setting in which a person is observed. In inpatient settings where the person is dressed in hospital robe and slippers, sitting on a bench in a hospital corridor, an impression is created that disposes psychiatrists toward a diagnosis of psychosis (which would be insanity under the Criminal Code).

In one study involving interviews by both British and American psychiatrists, American psychiatrists not only reported almost twice as many symptoms per patient as did the British psychiatrists, but in addition they reported differences in the types of symptoms observed.

I am more comfortable about psychiatric evidence relating to the sanity of an accused. True, it is only opinion evidence. But, by cross-examination of opposing experts, juries are in a much better position to decide which evidence to accept on vital issues concerning the mental state of the accused.

Must be Curbed

My real concern is the enormous power psychiatrists have established in determining whether an accused is "potentially dangerous" and whether an accused should be certified. Despite their trappings of expertise, I suggest that psychiatrists are not uniquely qualified with respect to these issues and their power must be curbed. Everyone makes mistakes, but, as Chesher learned, a psychiatrist's mistake can deprive you of your liberty with no real right of appeal.

No Right of Review

Any person charged with a criminal offence is entitled to a bail hearing after being in custody for no more than three days. But a single psychiatrist who is concerned about the potential dangerousness of an individual to himself or others may certify that person to a mental institution and there is no right of review for 30 days. This cannot be right and must be changed.

On the advice of a single psychiatrist that a person may be mentally ill, a judge may commit an accused person to a psychiatric facility for up to 60 days for assessment and there is no right of review. This cannot be right and must be changed.

The rights of people suspected of being mentally ill should be the subject of concern for all of us. Their rights should be no different than the rights of all citizens of this country.

The Separatists

By GERARD LOUGHRAN

Demands for independence by minorities in Canada and Britain have brought to light a global trend to "massive fragmentation" of nation-states that threatens the future of many countries.

A recent survey shows that breakaway factions are costing untold numbers of lives and billions of dollars in material destruction around the world. Autonomy movements of varying seriousness range from East Timor to Eritrea, France to Pakistan, Spain to Yugoslavia to the Soviet Union and beyond.

As soon as one issue is settled — by balkanization, force or occasionally agreement — another emerges.

In the United States, the search for ethnic and cultural recognition is reflected in the recent upsurge of demands by American Indians for the return of traditional homelands.

In some cases, nation-states born of a painful unification process are threatened with disintegration into their original parts. In a wider sense, the search for identity is jeopardizing international order, as in Lebanon and Southern Africa.

"Politically, the world is going through a period of massive fragmentation. This process is taking place on a universal scale," said Harold R. Isaacs, a professor of political science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a specialist on national minorities. "Wherever you look at the world scene today it is the same boiling cauldron."

Isaacs, who explored the separatism issue in his book, itself — it has never happened before.

"As to where we are going, the future is dim and cloudy. Lebanon and Ulster are examples of how bloody this can get. Bloodiness is built into this situation."

Osaacs, who explored the separatism issue in his book, "Idols of the Tribe," traced the trend to the end of empire. "Two world wars knocked apart previous global systems. The empires are now 140-odd states and since each state, a former colony, was put together arbitrarily in the first place, they are filled with disparities which now are becoming evident."

The Sage and the Novelist

By ROBERT FULFORD

Saul Bellow came out sounding strangely like a character in a Saul Bellow novel when he gave his Nobel Prize lecture at Stockholm the other day. The lecture signalled a new stage in Bellow's gradual emergence from behind the fictional masks he has created over three decades. At 61 he may be transforming himself from novelist into sage.

The major characters in Bellow's late novels are very like each other. Moses Herzog in Herzog, Sammler in Mr. Sammler's Planet, Charlie Citrine in Humboldt's Gift — they are all troubled, anxious thinkers, searching for some philosophical grip on the condition of mankind.

Those of us who love Bellow but have never met him have wondered at the source of these characters. His recent utterances make it plain that they are all versions of Saul Bellow himself.

His first non-fiction book, To Jerusalem And Back, put Bellow clearly before us a few months ago. The "I" of that book, touring Jerusalem, meeting officials and private citizens, reflecting on geopolitics and morality, closely resembles Herzog, Sammler, and Citrine. He has the same nervous warmth, the same energy, and the same rage at famous intellectuals (like Jean-Paul Sarte) who affect to love humanity but casually write off sections of it (such as Israel) in the name of some bloodless abstraction.

These Bellow characters, and now Bellow himself, see the intellectual world as a failure. They demand that the intellectuals, like Hebrew prophets, set mankind on the true path.

This was the burden of Bellow's Stockholm speech. He insisted that modern writers have failed us — have failed the world — by refusing or neglecting to see mankind clearly.

He argued that the writers who dominate literature now take a stereotyped view of humanity — "mass society, dehumanization, and the rest. How weary we are of them."

And he said:

"How poorly they represent us. The pictures they offer no more resemble us than we resemble the reconstructed reptiles and other monsters in a museum of paleontology. We are much more limber, versatile, better articulated, there is much more to us . . ."

Bellow admiringly mentioned Lawrence, Proust, Tolstoy, Joyce, Dostoyevsky, and Conrad. He seemed to be saying that they, in various ways, possessed a grander — and more central — view of humanity than the writers of the late 20th century.

Bellow's views have about them a yearning generosity that can't be anything less than attractive. And when he states them he stands on an imposing platform constructed of half a dozen major novels.

BELLOW . . . self-contradiction

And yet, and yet . . .

The novelists and storytellers I read, or anyway the best of them, are engaged in exactly what Bellow says is the function of literature. Solzhenitsyn, Greene, Isaac Singer, Brian Moore, Nabokov, Simenon, Borges — they are involved in the complicated process of stripping away the inessentials and describing what matters. They put before us flashes of intuition (Bellow calls them "true impressions") that are as important to us as Conrad's intuitions were to his contemporaries That's why we read them.

No one will argue with Bellow's belief that the intellectual atmosphere is polluted by demeaning cliches about the nature of mankind. And there is nobility about the way he reminds us that mankind is vastly richer than its more despairing critics suggest. But the cliches he hates are put into the air not by the literary artists of our time but by the sociologists and journalists and professional idea-mongers whose habit is to reduce humanity to a series of quantifiable needs and impulses.

Even if you concede some of Bellow's dissatisfaction with the themes of current literature, his Tolstoyesque demand for books to guide and inspire us is a prescription for literary obsolescence. It throws up thoughts of H. G. Wells and Victor Hugo and other literary moralists. There are geniuses who can set out to inspire mankind and still write great books, but when you have mentioned Tolstoy you are getting close to the end of the list.

As for Bellow, what we cherish in his books is not the windy talk of his protagonists (interesting as that is) but the sharp clash of characters, the endlessly rich irony, the bite of the human portraits, the profoundly local atmosphere, above all the language — what Leslie Fiedler calls Bellow's "rich, crazy poetry, a juxtaposition of high and low style, elegance and slang." These are the values that count in literature. But then Bellow the novelist has always known that, even if Bellow the sage seems bent on forgetting it.

Steady Job Has Ended for Carl Coates

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Back in 1937 the only thing Carl Coates wanted was a steady job.

It took him three years but he finally got it—with the Victoria fire department.

Coates, who for the past 10 years has been the department's deputy chief, retired New Year's Eve.

In an interview at his home at 2662 Avebury, Coates said he was pleased to be a part of the force that has grown from a handful of men to its present strength of 103 over the 37 years he was on the job.

He served under eight chiefs and attended so many fires, he said, he couldn't begin to count them all.

One of the last of the "smoke-eaters," he said in the early days old-timers disdained using air masks while fighting fires and regarded anyone who did as something of a "weak sister."

"Fortunately the ideas have changed," said Coates who is 60. "Now firefighters are forbidden to enter a burning building without wearing a mask."

He noted other changes through the years, most important being the increased emphasis on fire prevention and firefighter training.

Coates played a large role in developing both programs on the force.

Born in Duncan, he was raised in Victoria and grew up in the Fernwood district less than a mile from his present home. He never used his Christian names Robert John McCall. His parents nicknamed him Call and "through some misunderstanding" was later tagged Carl.

He left school in 1934 at the height of the depression and found work with Victoria grocer Jim Adams.

"The only reason I got the job was because I could play a bit of basketball," he said.

He played three years with the Dominoes, the Dominion champions, and later coached junior teams.

Coates

In 1937 he applied to be a fireman and one afternoon in early 1940 received a call for an interview.

"I couldn't figure out why the chief—Alec Munro—wanted to see me. I'd forgotten all about the application."

He has had his fair share of close shaves, he has been cut and bruised, overcome by smoke—all hazards of the occupation—but none of the injuries was serious. "I guess I was lucky."

He was appointed lieutenant in 1962 and promoted to deputy chief in February, 1967, succeeding the current chief Eric Simmons.

"One of the things that made the job easier for me in dealing with all segments of the public was not only a natural knowledge of the local geography," but also that I knew such a large circle of people. That made all the difference," he said.

Coates married in 1939 and he and his wife Jocelyn had three children, Ian, 31, Ross, 25 and Miriam, 22. Jocelyn died in 1970 and five years later he married his second wife, Jean.

In retirement Coates plans "to do all the things I never had time to do before."

LIBRARY BOARD EYES NEW SITE

A parcel of privately-owned land on Blanshard between Pandora and Comorant has been recommended by the Greater Victoria Library Board for a new central library.

In a letter to the four core municipalities, the board asked that the site be considered for construction of a joint central library and arts centre.

Esquimalt Mayor Arthur Young told council the letter was "really only for information," and it was tabled.

Oak Bay Council received and filed the letter, while Saanich referred it to its finance committee.

Victoria Mayor Michael Young in his inaugural address, suggested the facility go on the site owned by the provincial government at Blanshard and Courtney Streets currently being developed as a parking building.

Ald. Shirley Dowell, Oak Bay representative on the library board, said the idea of the arts centre has not yet been formally approved.

It is still largely the idea of one member of the board, she said.

'I'll Scatter Your Brains,' Youth Claims Accused Told Him

A 16-year-old youth told a county court jury Tuesday that Daniel Robert O'Brien, 35, of 1145 Mason, told him "I'll scatter your brains across the street" unless he paid him $150.

Malcolm Berge, who used to live here but is now in Langley, said he was taken to O'Brien's house Aug. 8 by Daniel White.

O'Brien is accused of attempting to extort $150 from Berge.

Berge, 15 at the time, said he had earlier received a note at the group foster house where he lived saying "get hold of us before we get hold of you."

While walking on Pandora Avenue with two friends, White drove up with a girl in the car and he left his friends and went with them to a Mason Street house.

He said O'Brien and another man were in the house and O'Brien asked if he got the note.

Berge said O'Brien told him he needed the $150 to pay a lawyer because police had caught him with some illegal firearms.

Two days later, he said he telephoned O'Brien from the Victoria police station and O'Brien told him to meet him at the Beacon Drive-In restaurant, but he didn't meet O'Brien.

Cross-examined by defence counsel Mike Hutchison, Berge agreed he hadn't known O'Brien before Aug. 8 but he understood from White that seven pounds of marijuana he and two friends had stolen from a house next door to O'Brien belonged to O'Brien.

He said White met him in Metchosin in July and told him people were looking for him and that he owed $800 to pay back the people who owned the marijuana.

Berge said "I don't know" when asked why O'Brien would say get in touch with him in a note when he hadn't met him before and didn't know him.

Berge agreed that White said at O'Brien's house that O'Brien "wouldn't have to dirty his hands" and he would do it, in reference to the remark about "scattering your brains."

But he denied Hutchinson's suggestion that the only threats made at the house came from White and not O'Brien.

And Doyle, who used to live at the same foster house as Berge, said two men came to the door in July asking for Berge and she identified one of them as O'Brien.

She said Berge wasn't home and O'Brien wrote a message saying "Malcolm get hold of us before we get hold of you" and signed it "Dan" and the other man put on a swastika sign.

She said she didn't know the second man but it wasn't Daniel White, whom she knew.

Foster house parent Cliff House said Doyle came to him with a note July 26 which said "Malcolm get hold of us before we get hold of you." There were initials on the bottom which he couldn't recall and a swastika sign.

He saw two men getting into a car outside the house and wrote down the licence number and called police.

House said Berge wouldn't talk to him about the note when he returned home but on Aug. 10 was "very agitated" and "apprehensive" and they went to city police.

Sgt. John Maybin said Berge and House saw him Aug. 10 and an investigation was launched. That evening, he said O'Brien was taken into custody.

He said Berge made two phone calls from the police station, the first to White and the second to a person "I believe to be" O'Brien. The second call was tape recorded.

He said "that's correct" when asked if White was arrested on the same charge as O'Brien, a couple of days later.

JUNE FERRIES FOR BURRARD

The province's newest ferry system — the Burrard Inlet passenger service — will start up in June, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis has announced.

The $45.9 million service will operate between Vancouver and the North Shore.

Two Victoria-built, 400-passenger capacity vessels, the Burrard Beaver and the Burrard Otter, will cross the inlet at eight-minute intervals to tie in with bus services on both sides.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 30-year-old Victoria man was denied bail Tuesday in Victoria provincial court on two charges of theft under $200.

Milne, represented by Peter Freeman, faced an additional charge of possession of stolen property, some narcotics and controlled drugs.

Judge William Ostler, on a request from Freeman, remanded Milne until Friday for election and bail hearing.

Trial for James Michael Pogue, 33, of 95 Wellington, on a Dec. 1 charge of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking was set for April 25.

Pogue chose trial by judge alone Tuesday.

Ostler sentenced a 30-year-old man who pleaded guilty to his third conviction of possession of narcotics to seven days in jail.

Robert Ronaldson, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to a Dec. 8 charge of possession of marijuana as well as a Dec. 20 charge of failing to appear at the Victoria city police station for fingerprinting and was given seven-day, concurrent sentences.

Three 17-year-olds, facing a breaking and entering with intent charge in connection with a Dec. 21 break-in at Arbutus junior high, 2306 Edgelow, had their trial date set for April 19.

Dwight James Anglehart, 4989 Georgia Park Terrace; Martin Rayner, 4085 Ebony Terrace; and Richard Charles Velay, 2164 Ferndale, elected to be tried by judge without jury.

Two character witnesses, called by defence lawyer Clifford Watt in support of a request for discharge for a former Victoria man now living in Vancouver, failed to persuade Ostler to grant the discharge.

Walter Vandale, 52, pleaded guilty to a Dec. 1 charge of stealing $3.29 worth of pork chops from a Canada Safeway store in Victoria.

Watt argued that a conviction would jeopardize Vandale's chance for promotion as a grain inspector but Ostler sided with Crown counsel Robert Mulligan that this case was no different from any other shoplifting case and levied a $100 fine.

A 20-year-old Canadian Forces man was fined $50 and ordered to take an impaired driver's course after pleading guilty to breach of probation.

Court was told Thomas Parsons was ordered Aug. 12 by Judge Blake Ajlan to take the impaired driver's course and failed to do so. He was fined $450 and was also placed on six months' probation at the time on an impaired driving conviction.

Ostler tacked on a further six-month probation and again ordered Parsons to take the course.

Toronto 1976

TORONTO (CP)—The Toronto Stock Exchange recorded big gains in both volume and value of shares traded during 1976.

Canada's largest exchange recorded 549.2 shares traded compared to 469.6 million in 1975, up 17 per cent, according to preliminary figures.

The statistics also show that the total dollar value traded rose by 24.6 per cent to $5,093.4 million from the $4,089 million traded in 1975.

As in the past, the bulk of trading occurred at the Toronto exchange, which absorbed 73.3 per cent of the total value of trading on all Canadian exchanges, and 47.8 per cent of the total share volume.

In the following tables provided by the exchange, the net change has been calculated from the closing price of 1975 unless the issue was newly listed in 1976, in this case, the change is calculated from the stock's first trade after listing.

If a stock split occurred during 1976, the prices and volumes are adjusted to reflect the split and the high-low for 1975 will also be shown on the split basis.

k—initial dividend; n—plus stock dividend; p—paid in the latest 12 months; r—in arrears and annual rate; v—payable in U.S. funds; x—extra declared in latest 12 months; y—stock dividend; z—less than a board lot.

Old Distillery Re-Activated

MINNEDOSA, Man. (CP) — A group of 23 Western Manitoba businessmen has bought and plans to reopen an eight-year-old local distillery that has been standing idle for several years.

"We've been working on this situation for the last 18 months," Minnedosa mayor Jim Burgess said Monday. "It should mean 25 new jobs when the distillery gets back into production."

C M D Distilleries Ltd., formed by businessmen in Brandon and Minnedosa, purchased the distillery from Melcher's Distilleries Ltd. of Montreal for $2.5 million. CMD also has an option to buy equipment and other distilery facilities.

"It has been quite a fight to get the financing put together," said Mr. Burgess. "Financing for a thing like this is so much easier in the bigger centres. It's a problem to get financing for rural areas."

Company secretary E. C. Baker of Brandon said the firm has applied for a grant from the federal department of regional economic expansion to build a full bottling plant alongside the distillery.

He said the plan is to resume full production at the distillery in the spring, with a staff of between 20 and 22. With a bottling plant, another 30 to 35 workers would be employed.

The distillery was shut down three years ago when its output failed to find enough of a market and the owners were experiencing financial difficulties.

Mr. Baker said CMD concluded that "there is a real place for an independent distillery of this size in Western Canada."

He said the plant initially will produce three qualities of rye and a vodka.

"Eventually we plan to have a Manitoba-made rum," he added.

The plant originally was built by a group of Manitoba businessmen at a cost of about $4 million, with financial aid from the Manitoba Development Fund, a Crown corporation. Soon after the plant went into production in 1968, Melchers bought out the original group.

Finning

Finning Tractor and Equipment Co. Ltd. has expanded its operations into the Yukon by purchasing the assets of N. C. Machinery, board chairman W. M. Young reports in Vancouver.

Young said assets of N. C. Machinery, a subsidiary of Northern Commercial Company of Seattle, included a large Whitehorse facility employing 23 people.

Finning has sold and serviced Caterpillar equipment in British Columbia since 1933 and has 43 locations throughout the province and at Inuvik and Fort Simpson in the Northwest Territories.

Cargill

Cargill Grain Co. Ltd. Winnipeg has announced consolidated gross sales of $574 million in the year ended last May 31, the first full financial year after acquisition of National Grain Co.

Earnings for the 12-month period were $8.9 million, representing a return on sales of 1.5 per cent.

Corporate income tax amounted to $9.9 million and capital expenditures were $10.6 million. The company also reported a staff increase of six per cent and employees now number more than 900.

Senior vice-president Richard Dawson said the step was taken because of the relationship between the public and business "in today's business environment."

"Although we are a private company, we are also a well known company," Dawson said. "I'm very happy about the decision."

TUESDAY

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were lower in active trading on the Canadian bond market Tuesday. The short end of the market was unchahged while the mid and long-term issues were up one-half of a point. Provincial and corporate issues were off one-half. Day-to-day money was available at 8¼ per cent.

Merger Solves Debts

TOKYO (AP) — C. Itoh and Co., Japan's fourth largest trading firm, and debt-ridden Ataka and Co., 10th largest Japanese trader, have signed a memorandum calling for their merger Oct. 1.

Ataka's financial liabilities are estimated to total one trillion yen ($3.4 billion U.S.).

Sumitomo Bank and the Kyowa Bank, Ataka's major creditors, issued a statement after the agreement signing last Wednesday that the move "not only involved the problem of a single private business firm but also of a scale affecting the whole national economy."

The two banks helped arrange the merger agreement after months of negotiations with the two trading firms.

The agreement calls for the two traders to set up a joint committee and formulate a contract for the merger. The contract will require approval at the shareholders meeting of the two companies. It is expected to be signed at the end of May.

The merger will lead to the establishment of the third largest trading house in Japan, ranking after Mitsubishi Corp. and Mitsui and Co. Marubeni is currently Japan's third largest trader.

Then ew trading house will go by the name of C. Itoh and Co. which currently employs 7,600 workers. It also will employ about half of Ataka's 3,500 employees.

Bond Market Experts Cautious in Predictions

The Canadian Press

Canadian bond market experts look at the new year with caution and predictions that range from carefully optimistic to bleak.

The view of the more hopeful was expressed by Dominion Securities Harris analysts in a recent quarterly publication.

"We remain optimistic about the outlook for the Canadian bond market and feel that further gains are in store," said DSH's Market Strategy.

"However, we are less optimistic than previously and feel that in the latter part of 1977, the increasing volume of new domestic issues may limit the decline of bond yields."

The Conference Board in Canada voiced a more pessimistic view in its forecast.

"The pace of economic activity in Canada in 1977 will experience a substantial slowdown," it said.

The demand for short-term funds in the bond market is expected to be weak, continuing the 1976 decline in rates.

"Longer-term rates will decline at a more moderate pace with the average yield on industrial bonds projected to decline more than 30 basis points during the year," the Conference Board concluded.

The strength of the market towards the end of 1976 belied earlier predictions of heavy declines following the election in Quebec of a party committed to independence.

"Despite some hesitation regarding the implications of the Quebec provincial election results and the dramatic decline in the foreign exchange rates, the tone of the market remains very strong," said Dominion Securities Harris shortly after the election.

In the weeks that followed, Canadian bonds continued firm on most foreign markets with the exception of Quebec issues.

"The spread on Quebec bonds in United States markets has deteriorated since the Nov. 15 election," said economist Peter Martin of McLeod, Young, Weir and Co. Ltd.

He cited the recent $13-million city of Laval bond issue that was turned down in the United States and had to be placed in Canada.

Quebec borrowing costs have gone up about one-half of one per cent since the election, "but it is not yet having a negative effect on Canadian borrowers in general."

Martin said the recent $200-million Ontario Hydro and $175-million British Columbia issues are examples of this. Over-all, 1976 was a good year for raising money, particularly in the field of foreign borrowing.

Larger placements were made in the United States. Farther afield, the emergence of the Euromarket and of the Canadian dollar in that market ranked as an outstanding event of the year.

"In 1976, Canada sold close to $2 billion in a market that didn't exist a year ago," Martin said.

Another analyst predicted a further reduction of one quarter of one per cent in the bank rate in the first quarter of 1977 and the presentation of a Canada bond issue for Feb. 1.

Several market experts stressed the danger of heavy foreign borrowing and said the federal government's current-account deficits are dangerously high and must be reduced.

"The major problem facing the country now is unemployment," said one analyst.

"But if inflation starts rising again, it will become the prime target."

LOG HOUSE VERDICT DUE

FORT ST. JAMES (CP) — Nevoslic Indian band members will know next week if they can go ahead with a $200,000 log house building plant, chief Nick Prince said Tuesday.

If the loan is approved, the plant will go into operation this spring producing from 10 to 15 log homes a year.

B.C. N-Power Foes Joined By Opposition Parties

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition party spokesmen have joined ecological groups in opposing development of nuclear power in British Columbia as a major energy source.

Robert Bonner, chairman of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, said last week that nuclear generation would have to come to the province and construction of nuclear plants could begin in 10 years.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace said Tuesday that introduction of nuclear power should be delayed as long as possible and that with B.C.'s vast hydro-electric and thermal power-producing potential, discussion of nuclear power is premature.

He said the question may be "quite an election issue down the road, perhaps 10 years or even sooner," and a plebiscite on the issue would be a good idea.

Former resources minister Bob Williams, speaking for the New Democratic Party, and Liberal leader Gordon Gibson both were skeptical about Bonner's comments.

"Maybe his job is just to fly kites for the government and maybe that's what he's doing on nuclear power," said Williams.

He said, Bonner has been making premature comments ever since he became Hydro chairman a year ago and "I suspect he will have to backtrack on the nuclear question."

Williams said until there is "Broad satisfaction in the scientific community" on adequate means of disposing nuclear wastes, "then it seems to be wrong-headed to go in that (nuclear) direction."

Gibson said he believed Bonner was "just trying to soften up public opinion . . . This is another one of the scare tactics they are using to try and justify whatever Hydro wants to do without adequate public scrutiny."

"When someone says it is a 'must' at the same time as he says planning hasn't even started, then he is just doing a little manoeuvering," said Gibson.

HEALTH PROBE STARTS FOR KITIMAT WORKERS

KITIMAT (CP) — Health examinations of 1,800 employees at the Alcan Aluminum smelter will begin Jan. 26 as part of a union study of working conditions, a Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers spokesman said this week.

Jim Brisebois, CASAW recording secretary, said the $75,000 study will use a computer to analyse results and "high-risk and abnormal cases will be identified for further in-depth study."

The investigation will be headed by Dr. Bertam Carnow, director of occupational and environmental medicine at the University of Illinois school of public health.

The first results of the study, undertaken after employees said they feared gases in the smelter were affecting their health, will be available in April.

200 Miles Won't Stop Fish 'Robbers'—Stevens

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's new 200-mile territorial limit will do nothing to protect the fishing industry or depleted fish resources, Homer Stevens, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, said Tuesday.

Stevens said foreign vessels will be licensed to take Canadian fish and "Japanese and United States vessels will continue robbing Canadians of our salmon."

Despite the limit, Canada has agreed to allow four countries "to harvest 52.5 million pounds of fish off Canada's west coast under the pretence it is surplus," said Stevens.

Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc "does not even reveal the United States fleet may harvest another 50 million pounds in the same area," he said.

American vessels will have unrestricted access to Canadian waters until special treaties are signed with the United States.

"Imagine the reaction on the prairies when the harvest was ready if anyone with a combine could come and take wheat,' said Stevens. "That is the situation we face."

Union studies show that fish stocks would take 10 years to regenerate even if all foreign vessels were banned, he said. Instead, Canadian tax money is being used to watch the expanded Canadian territory for vessels further depleting the stocks.

Stevens said his union also has discovered moves by foreign firms to invest in Canadian companies in joint ventures to circumvent the new fishing controls.

The decision to allow other nations to take surplus fish amounts to exporting Canadian jobs, he said.

"The Canadian fishermen, tendermen and shoreworkers on both coasts are suffering mass unemployment and under-employment while LeBlanc utters supercilious phrases about Canadian control," said Stevens.

"Desperately-needed expansion of resource development programs will be slashed to pay for surveillance of foreign fishing which not only deprives us of jobs but also retards rehabilitation of our stocks."

Stevens said, "there are not surplus stocks of fish on either coast."

Ruling Set Aside On Hydro Pension

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice George L. Murray Tuesday set aside a provincial Labor Relations Board decision requiring B.C. Hydro to bargain collectively under the Labor Code regarding superannuation allowances.

Hydro sought to quash the order on the grounds that the board was in error in its decision that a section of the Labor Code requiring Hydro to bargain regarding superannuation which is governed by the British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority Act.

Mr. Justice Murray said that it was with considerable hesitation and reluctance that he upheld submissions by Jack Giles that the board was wrong and had misconstrued the effect of Hydro and Power Authority Act provisions.

He said a section of the act conferred a statutory unfettered power on Hydro in the establishment of a pension plan and its terms and conditions and that this power was subject only to approval of the provincial cabinet.

"My opinion in this connection is reinforced by the fact that the section deals not only with superannuation allowances for employees of Hydro but also for directors.

"In view of the fact that the section deals only with a single fund it would appear to me to be anomalous to have trade unions negotiating on behalf of employees to effect the fund out of which directors also draw superannuation."

Three unions, Office and Technical Employees Local 378, Almagated Transit Union divisions 101-134 and local division 105 and the Electrical Workers Locals 213 and 258, represented by R. E. Cocking, had sought to negotiate changes in the plan.

Fee Eyed On Land Profits

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Mayor Harold Moffat says this city will charge a finder's fee for speculative profits gained by land developers who thwart the low-cost land development policy.

Speaking at the 1977 inaugural council meeting, Moffat said the new council will find it tough to set policy, impost fees, and "finders fees for those that are our opposition in land purchases and thwarting our low-cost and land development policy.

He said in an interview Tuesday that by "finder's fees" he means a fee to be paid to the city in return for development policies and costs that give speculators the opportunity to gain profits from escalating land values.

Moffat said he couldn't predict what the provincial government would do if the city charged such a fee.

"But they better smarten up down there and find out what is driving up the cost of housing," he said...

Moffat said land speculaand profits are increasing house prices, not construction.

The city develops and sells about half the lots marketed in this northern community.

Victoria, Saanich Clear Guestimated Budgets

Victoria and Saanich councils Tuesday approved in principle their provisional operating budgets for 1977, in an annual exercise which really doesn't have too much significance.

The Municipal Act requires all municipalities to adopt provisional budgets by the third Monday in January.

But preparation of the documents is largely based on inspired guesswork because detailed departmental requirements aren't known, aldermen haven't had an opportunity to scrutinize them and levies by other agencies have yet to be determined.

Adoption of the provisional budget provides interim authority to spend money until the final budget is adopted in May.

Victoria's provisional budget estimates expenditures of $42.4 million, an increase of about $2.4 million or 5.9 per cent on the actual 1976 operating budget.

Saanich's provisional budget of $32,886,170 would require a tax rate of 60.15 mills, compared to 57.12 mills in 1976—a 5.3 increase.

"This provisional budget is a total increase of approximately $780,000 dollars over 1976, which is 2.4 per cent. The general municipal tax levy of $12,019,000 required to meet this budget is an increase over 1976 of $1,053,340, or 9.6 per cent," comptroller-treasurer Roy Broughton reported.

Control Costs, Butler Urges

Fiscal restraint in 1977 was urged upon Central Saanich council by Mayor Jean Butler in an inaugural address Tuesday that was similar in tone to speeches in the other two Saanich Peninsula communities.

Her speech was delivered by acting mayor Frank Waring in the mayor's absence due to illness in the family.

Restaint was called for because costs for services such as water and recreation, education and police protection are continuing to rise.

But in all three areas — Central and North Saanich municipalities and Sidney village — the inaugural speeches showed concern for proper planning in co-operation with the regional district and for careful spending of recreation dollars.

Mayor Paul grieve also was absent, out of the country, and North Saanich's inaugural address was prepared and given by acting mayor George Westwood, who cited the "great step forward" in the establishment last year of the peninsula water commission.

Prices Shuffled

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet authorities today put into effect a sweeping series of changes in retail prices of consumer goods.

N. T. Glushkov, chairman of the Soviet state committee on rices told Pravda retail prices were being reduced between five and 25 per cent on a variety of items while unspecified increases were being posted for other items.

Glushkov also reported that effective April 1 higher fares will be charged for air, sea and river, and taxi transportation.

Retail prices hikes effective today covered carpets, tailored clothing, natural silk material, fancy glassware and top quality books.

CAMOSUN MAKES PLANS FOR EXPANSION

Camosun College will be ready to plan expanded facilities as soon as a Community College Act is passed, principal Grant Fisher told the college council Tuesday.

But because there has been little direction from the education department, Fisher has set limits for the planning staff to work within.

Fisher said he asked staff to work within a $10 million limit for the Landsdowne campus and $1 million for Interurban campus in planning capital projects.

He said college seemed to have reached a stalemate with the province.

"Unless we take action ourselves, we will get nowhere."

Councillors agreed the province is making little effort to solicit the views of college councils in drawing up the act.

Communication has all been the other way," councillor Dr. Hal Knight said. "We're trying to penetrate the veil down there."

An act dealing with community colleges in the province has been promised for the spring session of the legislature which opens Jan. 13.

How to renew your Autoplan Insurance and Motor Vehicle Licence

YOU WILL SOON RECEIVE BY MAIL:

- A Renewal Form for your 1977/78 Autoplan Insurance and Motor Vehicle Licence.
- A Brochure which outlines the steps which you should follow to renew your insurance and licence.
- A new guide, "All About Autoplan" which provides detailed information on Autoplan insurance and the types of coverage which are available.

BE SURE TO CHECK YOUR RATE CLASS NUMBER

It is very important this renewal year that you double-check your Rate Class code because there are changes in Rate Classes for 1977/78.

Both the Renewal Brochure and the "All About Autoplan" Guide carry a Rate Class chart. Compare the present use of your vehicle and the age, sex, and marital status of the drivers with the Rate Class Chart.

Locate your correct Rate Class number on the chart and compare it with the number in the box on your Renewal Form. If there is a change in your Rate Class or if there are three asterisks () on your form you should consult an Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office.

LICENCE NUMBER AND MARITAL STATUS

For the first time, on the 1977/78 Renewal Form you will find a box headed "Principal Operator's Driver's Licence No. and Marital Status." Be sure to bring the Driver's licence number of the Principal Operator of EACH VEHICLE YOU ARE INSURING when you visit your Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office.

VEHICLE EQUIPMENT CHART

The equipment chart on pages 18 and 19 of the new Guide "All About Autoplan" lists a variety of standard and specialized vehicle equipment and indicates the categories under which such equipment can be insured.

Prepare a list of the vehicle equipment you want to insure before visiting your Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office.

ACCIDENT INFORMATION FORM

The last page of the new "All About Autoplan" guide is a handy Accident Information reporting form.

If you keep the Guide in your glove compartment, you will always have this reporting form handy in case of accident. Just fill in the accident details and hand the form to the ICBC adjuster when you take your vehicle to an ICBC claims facility.

SAFE DRIVING DISCOUNT

If you have not had a blameworthy accident in the period October 1, 1975 to September 30, 1976 you will be eligible for a Safe Driving Discount of 17.5% off your 1977/78 premium. This discount will be indicated as a dollar amount on your Autoplan insurance renewal form. However, if it is not shown on your form and you feel you are entitled to it, please consult your Autoplan agent or any Motor Vehicle Branch office.

SINGLE MALE DRIVERS UNDER 25

In addition to the 17.5% Safe Driving Discount, single male drivers under 25, who qualify, will also receive a Safe Driving Grant equal to 25% of their 1976/77 Autoplan insurance premium. However, you will not receive the Grant automatically. You will have to apply. Grant payments will be made by separate cheque, but you will have to apply on a form that you should already have received by mail. If you have not received the form, pick one up at the nearest Motor Vehicle Branch office.

Applications for the Single Male Drivers Under 25 Safe Driving Grant must be completed by April 1, 1977. They should be mailed to the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, P.O. Box 5050, Vancouver, B.C. V6B 4T4.

FINANCE PLAN

An ICBC finance plan is available for your convenience. If you use the plan, you must still make full payment for your licence plate fees and a 25% down-payment on your Autoplan insurance premium; the balance will require three instalment payments at two-month intervals. These payments will be automatically charged against your bank account if you elect to use this plan. The interest rate on the outstanding balance is 15% per annum (1¼% per month).

RENEWAL DATE

The deadline for renewal is midnight, February 28, 1977. Early renewal is more efficient and will save you valuable time. PLEASE RENEW EARLY.

WHERE TO RENEW

You can renew your Autoplan insurance at any Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office. If you have not received a renewal form in the mail, please bring your current 1976/77 Certificate of Insurance with you when you come to renew.

STILL IN DOUBT?

After studying the Renewal Brochure and reading the new guide, "All About Autoplan," if you still have any questions please consult your Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office or call the ICBC Information Centre in Vancouver at 665-2800. Our long distance toll free number is 112-800-663-3051.

A blameworthy claim is one where the driver, (no matter who was driving), was responsible to any extent for causing bodily injury, property damage, or collision damage and for which a claim or loss has been paid by the Corporation.*

In most cases Autoplan premiums are lower in B.C. than in other provinces. Here's an example for your specific region.
Collision $100 deductible. Comprehensive $50 deductible.

- 'No Need' for More Apartments in Single-Family Areas
- 'Encouraging' But Not Reassuring, Says Fairfield Spokesman

Young Ready to Block Bulldozer Binge

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If Victoria city council heeds the advice of Mayor Mike Young, the bulldozers' wrecking spree is over in the city's residential neighborhoods.

Young told aldermen, in his address at Tuesday's inaugural council meeting, that he sees "no need or desire" for further apartment construction in existing single-family residential areas.

He said he intends to oppose further rezoning of such areas during the coming year, and urged council to do likewise.

The mayor's comments received a cautious welcome from Syd Langhelt, president of the Fairfield Community Association, who at the same meeting was appointed to a three-year term on the city's Advisory Planning Commission.

Langhelt, a prominent figure in the organized neighborhood fight against the demolition of houses for apartment development, said today Young's statement was "encouraging" but not entirely reassuring.

He pointed out that in recent months the Fairfield Community Association has asked council to down-zone certain apartment-zoned areas, but council has not acted on the requests.

If council virtually freezes other districts zoned for single-family use, these will come under "terrific pressure," he noted.

Langhelt said he was looking forward to his APC assignment, and called the appointment a recognition of the fact that neighborhood groups have an important role in the community.

He added, wryly, that the other APC appointment announced Tuesday — that of developer Harvey Pinch — provided a "neat balance."

Young noted in his speech that in the past five years a "record total" of 8,500 residential units have been constructed, nearly all of them in the form of apartment and condominium construction.

"Serious questions must be asked whether this only achieves governmental objectives rather than genuine, popular requirements," he said.

In 1973 the city had established a new, lower density apartment category (R3L) which was intended to reduce the density of those areas already zoned for high-density apartments.

Unfortunately, he said, this new zone has been used mainly to up-zone existing single-family areas rather than encourage the development, "of more modest scale apartments and buildings in the then-existing apartment zones."

After urging council to resist this trend, Young said the city can continue to encourage apartment development in and around the central core area.

He also suggested that the R3L category be reviewed in an effort to reduce the size of apartment - condominium projects "to a more personal and human scale," and that council consider other concepts such as zero lot lines and smaller lots for individual family dwellings.

"In my opinion this certainly makes more sense than the destruction and displacement of existing, relatively low-cost family housing through the construction of massive apartment and condominium developments," he said.

Elsewhere in his inaugural speech, Young said the city should support and encourage the CPR in its tentative proposal to expand the Empress Hotel's Crystal Ballroom, providing convention facilities for up to 1,500 visitors.

If the idea becomes a firmer plan, he said, the city could relieve parking pressure on the convention centre by building a parking structure on land immediately north of the old Crystal Garden.

It might be possible to include roof-top bowling greens in the parking structure, giving the city's many bowlers year-round facilities and enabling the city to host major lawn bowling tournaments.

As a second phase of the development, Young suggested the city might consider using the Crystal Garden site to erect a civic auditorium and concert hall seating up to 2,500 people, "to serve major conventions and large-scale cultural performances."

Lum Slams Merger Talk, CRD's Clout

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum came out strongly against amalgamation, the growing powers of the Capital Regional District and the "archaic, paternalistic and restrictive" Municipal Act in his inaugural speech Tuesday.

He said proponents of amalgamation are misinformed when they claim amalgamation saves money.

"On the economics of amalgamation, it is easy to be drawn into the numbers game. I don't intend to fall into the trap," he said.

"Unfortunately, such savings exist only in the minds of the uninformed. The fact is, no major city has amalgamated in North America in the last 50 years and saved money."

Lum said the growing number of ratepayers' associations and other concerned citizens' organizations is a clear indication that people are determined to have more input into the decision-making processes which affect their lives. "Amalgamation would make this far more difficult" he said.

"The basic question is, then, are the residents of the Capital Regional District prepared to forego this greater measure of self-determination in return for a large, monolithic and impersonal bureaucracy? This is the real question, all else is frivolous talk."

Lum said the CRD's primary role should be centred on intermunicipal co-operation and co-ordinated action on problems common to all municipalities.

"In recent years I have become very concerned that the regional district is becoming more and more another level of government, a trend which, in my opinion, should be reversed," he said.

Lum called for a task force, representing both provincial and municipal government, to review the Municipal Act.

"The Municipal Act, in its present form, is archaic, paternalistic and restrictive," he said. "It delegates a great deal of responsibility to those elected to municipal office without the necessary authority and flexibility to carry out those responsibilities.

"I would like to see a joint task force appointed, representative of both levels of government, to conduct a thorough review of the act."

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis today agreed that the Municipal Act is "desperately in need of revision."

But the job, he said, would cost about $100,000 and could take 18 months.

"It's desperately in need of revision, of a putting together of all the amendments that have been tacked on over the years, but it's an expensive and lengthy process," Curtis said.

"It's on my list of tasks," he said, but could not promise a starting date for the job.

As mayor of Saanich for nine years, Curtis worked with the act and said that while he recognized its shortcomings, he does not find it paternalistic.

"It's bad in terms of telling you what you want to know. I even have trouble with the index.

"But I would take issue with paternalistic as an adjective. The province has to exercise some control over local governments."

Lum, noting the provincial premiers had negotiated a new cost-sharing formula with the federal government in December, said he hoped the provincial government will do the same with municipalities.

"At least they were afforded the opportunity to negotiate. We, on the other hand, have little input into the final decision-making process," he said.

It Was 'Hanky-Pranky'

It turned out to be just a prank but police were not, repeat not, amused.

It all started when Saanich police were called late Tuesday by an attendant at the Westview service station at Trans-Canada and Tillicum.

The attendant reported a car had stopped for gas.

In the back seat, he said, was what looked like a body draped in a sheet with hands tied behind its back.

Two other persons in the car were making "menacing gestures" to the "body", the attendant said.

The car sped off north on the highway but the attendant got the licence number.

Saanich police raced to the scene and when efforts to locate the car failed, alerted up-Island police detachments.

Shortly after midnight Duncan RCMP spotted the vehicle on Marshall Road. The "body" turned out to be a third man who was part of the prank.

"Aw, officer, we were just horsing around," the driver said. "We wanted to give the attendant a scare."

No charges are contemplated, police said regrettably.

Co-Op Drops Home Project

The Mount Stephen Co-Operative Housing Association has abandoned plans to build low-income housing on 4.5 acres at Mount Stephen and Ryan in Victoria.

Ken Rafuse, chairman of the group, today blamed provincial government bureaucracy for the decision.

Rafuse said that ever since the group began working on the project in March, 1974, "we've had one run-around after another."

In an "open letter" to Housing Minister Hugh Curtis on Tuesday, Rafuse accused the housing ministry of "buck-passing," and said many families would already be living in the complex if the government had moved quicker.

The association had been invited to submit a proposal on the project by Dec. 31 but Rafuse said government strictures prevented the group's participation.

He said the ministry requires any non-profit co-op engaged in a project to limit expenses to $45,000 a unit, thereby qualifying for a Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. mortgage.

"I challenge any builder to put up a complex at $45,000 a unit on the site," he said.

Rafuse said the provincial government, which owns the land, had originally agreed to sell it for $242,000 but now has it listed at $624,000.

He said underground servicing costs will run about $400,000, and per-unit cost of constructing a 61-unit complex would be about $35,000. The minimum finished cost of each unit would be about $52,000.

To qualify for CMHC mortgaging the group would have to redesign the entire project — and no one was prepared to do that, he said.

Four-Lane Contract Awarded

A Surrey construction firm has been awarded the $3.2 million contract to widen the Trans-Canada Highway between the Town and Country shopping centre and the Thetis Lake overpass.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday H. B. Construction Ltd. will start work soon.

Fraser said the total cost is estimated at about $7.2 million, including the cost of acquiring right-of-way land.

The project should employ about 75 people and is expected to be finished by late 1978.

The densely-congested stretch of highway, which carried more than 1,500 vehicles per hour in peak commuting periods, will be widened to four lanes.

Associated work will include the realignment of access ramps at the Thetis Lake overpass and blocking off access from some minor feeder roads.

Inmate Fled Across Line

A 30-year-old inmate at William Head released Dec. 31 on a two-day temporary pass has probably fled to the United States, police said today.

Anthony Vito Genovese was among 207 prisoners released from federal penitentiaries in Canada over the New Year.

Genovese, an American citizen, was sentenced in August, 1974, to 10 years, one month and 11 days for armed robbery, possession of a prohibited weapon and possession of marijuana. He was due for release July 20, 1981.

Colwood RCMP said Genovese was let out of prison at 8 a.m. Dec. 31 and was to return at 11 p.m. the next day. It was the 12th time he had received a temporary pass since transferred to William Head.

He spent the day and night at an apartment at 906 St. Charles loaned by a friend.

Police said on Jan. 1, an anonymous caller phoned to say Genovese had no intention of returning.

Delta police were alerted and checked out travellers on the B.C. Ferries. For two days RCMP checked out passengers at Victoria airport and ferry departure points on southern Vancouver Island.

It Started with Cleaning the Chimney

PERCY TEMPLEMAN
. . . doesn't bother now

max low

Okay, the new year is only five days old and I bet you've broken them already.

All those resolutions weren't meant to last, were they? That's if you even bothered to make any. And most people I asked didn't.

"I never make them!" said the first guy I approached. And another said:

"Resolutions? None thanks, except maybe to have more fun."

One woman was quite candid:

"I don't make any because I always break 'em all, anyway. Well, isn't that about the size of it? You see, that way I can say I'm really a good girl because I didn't break any of my New Year's resolutions."

That is about the size of it.

Most people don't make resolutions because they know they won't keep them. It would be an exercise in futility. Many don't even give the habit of resolving to turn over a new leaf much thought any more.

One pretty young miss seemed quite baffled by my question.

"Now let's see, resolutions? They're when you're trying to improve something about yourself, aren't they? Well, I wasn't going to make any this year!"

She's already perfect, no doubt.

Even though you may no longer indulge in the futile art of resolving, have you ever wondered when and where the custom of making resolutions originated?

Well, as far as I can make out (with the help of a couple of reference books), the early English took over many of the Roman New Year's Day customs and later added one of their own — cleaning the chimneys on New Year's Day. This was supposed to bring good luck to the household during the coming year.

With the passage of time, cleaning the chimney became "cleaning the slate" or in other words making resolutions to correct faults and bad habits, resolving to make the new year better.

My Shawnigan neighbor Percy Templeman, who will be 93 in August and who first went out to the lake in 1924 long before there were electricity or telephones out there and the "roads" were mere logging tracks, admits he "doesn't bother" making resolutions any more. But both he and his daughter Evelyn Barr feel the custom has lost a lot of meaning.

"Few people would stick to any resolutions they make nowadays, so they don't make them," says Mrs. Barr, who is in her 70s. "Things are far too easy now and people don't have any will-power. These people who expect so much and grumble about everything should have been around in the 1930s to see what had to be done just to stay alive."

She's right.

Still, foolish as ever, I decided to make a few resolutions that I knew, too, probably wouldn't last.

I resolved to TRY not to yell at my kids but instead to talk to them calmly with reason. That one went by the board on Jan. 1 — at 7 a.m.!

I resolved also to write more than one letter a year to my brother and sister who live at opposite ends of the earth (only because they have both promised to do the same). And I resolved not to write my columns too long in 1977 as doing this in 1975 and 1976 never failed to incur the wrath of the City Editor.

Anyway, it looks like being a good year as my wife's resolution is to talk as kindly to me as she does to the dogs . . .

Most popular by far among the resolutions made by those who haven't given up the custom is also, by far, the most likely to be broken — to give up smoking. It's something many would just love to do but can't manage it. Again the old will-power.

From the others I spoke to there were vows to lose weight and to get on with jobs they have been putting off. Like the guy who has finally resolved to make a start on building that sundeck with timber that's been lying there for six months.

But my favorite came from an attractive lady I know. And I'm sure she won't mind if I borrow it.

"I've decided I've got to be more demonstrative in my love toward my husband," she told me. "Really, I mean, I'm not always very affectionate. Many of us aren't.

"And you stop and think what's life all about if you don't have loving relationships.

She smiled attractively.

"I see the importance of this all around me with my grandchildren. So I've decided this year it's important to be more loving to my husband."

What a lovely one. More love.

Rookies Spark Chiefs As Cats Fail to Click

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

It doesn't take much to swing the decision around in junior hockey.

A Victoria Cougar combination that had been very dependable in past games suffers a letdown . . .

On the other side of the fence, a combination that wasn't expected to do much for Kamloops Chiefs' cause comes up an important contributor . . .

Those turnabouts best explain how Kamloops recorded its 5-4 victory over Victoria in their Western Canada Hockey League meeting Tuesday evening in Memorial Arena.

Consistently Victoria's best defencemen during the first half of this season, Leroy Heck and Lorry Gloeckner were paired as one of the Cougar defence combinations. It wasn't an evening they want to remember.

They were on the ice for four of Kamloops' five goals. The fault wasn't entirely theirs on Chiefs' first two goals, both power-play efforts. But both committed defensive sins on Kamloops' fourth goal, and were the rearguards of record when Anthony Thomas scored the winner midway through the final period.

Thomas' goal takes us to the other side of the fence.

The result, coming before 2,441 customers, extended a Victoria winless streak to nine games. There have been four tie games in that stretch, and Kamloops has done its bit to forge ahead into second place in the Western Division.

Now in second, two points ahead of the Cougars, Kamloops has taken five out of a possible six points in their last three games against Victoria.

But Tuesday's victory may have been costly for the Chiefs. Team captain Alan Young, who returned only recently after missing early action because of a hip injury, suffered possible torn ligaments and may be sidelined again.

The Cougars also have a casualty. Winger Brent Gogol, perhaps the most impressive of four newcomers in the Victoria lineup, suffered a broken nose in the first period.

Gogol was hit by a puck when he stooped to throw a check. He remained in the game, however.

Also playing their first games for Victoria were defenceman Glen Cochrane and centres Paul Enquist and Ron Trafford.

The infusion of the newcomers didn't help Cougars' cause. With new lines formed this week, Victoria's play lacked cohesion, both on attack and in the defensive zone.

The lack of cohesion was most obvious moments after Thomas' winner. Ryan Walter and Dan Clark of Kamloops drew minors in rapid succession but the Cougars, despite a two-man advantage for one minute, 38 seconds, failed to score.

Young, a standout, paced Kamloops with two goals. Dave Robinson and Errol Rausse added the others while Bill Jobson, Gregg Anderson, Geordie Robertson and Dennis Fenske scored for the Cougars.

Cougars played a strong physical game but the penalty-calls were moderate. Kamloops drew six of the 11 minors and each team was hit with a major and misconduct.

The misconducts — to Anderson and Kamloops goaltender Gary Nakrayko — did much to tone down rising tempers. Only five minors were called after the misconducts were assessed at the end of the second period.

In other games Tuesday, Brandon Wheat Kings continued their runaway pace in the Eastern Division by trouncing Flin Flon Bombers 10-4 while Saskatoon Blades stretched Regina's record winless streak to 30 by clipping the Pats 5-3.

EIGHT KINGS PICKED

CALGARY (CP — Eight members of the Brandon Wheat Kings headed the list of Eastern team All-Stars announced Tuesday for the 1977 Western Canada Hockey League all-star game scheduled for Brandon Jan. 19.

Other defencemen named were Kevin McCarthy of Winnipeg Monarchs, Bryan Baron of Saskatoon, Gord Wappel of Regina Pats and Mike Panteluk of Lethbridge.

Right wingers Rocky Saganiuk of Lethbridge and Guy Lash of Winnipeg were also named along with left wingers Bruce Hamilton of Saskatoon and Grant Eakin of Lethbridge.

The Western all-star team will be announced next week.

Canucks Flash Late Rally To Get Tie With Penguins

By The Canadian Press

Orland Kurtenbach has a difficult task ahead of him, but if Tuesday night's performance is any indication, he may be just what Vancouver Canucks need to turn around their Natitonal Hockey League season.

The Canucks spotted Pittsburgh Penguins a 2-0 lead Tuesday, but salvaged a 2-2 tie on Dennis Ververgaert's goal with 47 seconds left in the game.

"They stayed in there without changing their style and came back to tie it," said Kurtenbach, who took over from Phil Maloney as Vancouver coach Dec. 22.

The Canucks now have won two and tied one in seven starts since Kurtenbach assumed the coaching duties — a considerable improvement when compared with their 9-23-3 record before his appointment. Tuesday's tie moved Vancouver into a tie with Colorado Rockies for third spot in the Smythe Division, six points back of Chicago and three up on Minnesota North Stars.

In other games Tuesday, Detroit Red Wings and Washington Capitals tied 2-2, while St. Louis Blues edged Los Angeles Kings 4-3.

The Penguins took a 2-0 first-period lead on goals 50 seconds apart by Rick Kehoe and Ron Schock. After a scoreless second period, Chris Oddleifson scored for Vancouver at 10:17 of the third, and Kurtenbach said the club then came to life.

"We had a lot of chances but Herron stopped us cold," the Vancouver coach said of Pittsburgh goaltender Denis Herron. "That is until Oddleifson scored on that screened slapshot."

The Canucks removed netminder Curt Ridley in the final minute and the manoeuvre paid off. Ververgaert pounced on a rebound and flipped it into the net on Herron's right side for his 15th goal of the season. He also assisted on Oddliefson's goal.

Bill Lochead had given Detroit a 1-0 first-period lead. After a scoreless second period, Bill Riley scored his first NHL goal and Tony White added his fifth of the season as the Capitals took a 2-1 lead midway through the third, setting the stage for Schofield's tying marker.

Claude Larose's unassisted goal with 5:33 left to play gave St. Louis the victory. Los Angeles, beginning a string of seven road games, had battled back from a 2-0 deficit to tie the game and deadlocked the contest a second time after the Blues had taken a 3-2 lead.

Pierre Plante, Ted Irvine and Larry Patey got the other St. Louis goals. Mike Murphy scored twice for Los Angeles with Bert Wilson getting the other goal for the visitors.

Oak Bay Presents Display of Power

Right at the start, Oak Bay Bays have served notice they intend to hold the balance of power in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League.

Bays, despite being short two players, set two possible records while mauling Belmont Braves 130-69 at Oak Bay in one of the season-opening contests.

In other games, Esquimalt Dockers nudged the Rams 47-44 at Mt. Douglas, Claremont Spartans edged visiting Dunsmuir Demons 75-73, Sectrum stopped Totems 68-46 at Victoria High and Parkland Panthers defeated the Roadrunners 52-44 at Reynolds.

Oak Bay's 130 points are believed to be a Vancouver Island record and possibly a British Columbia record.

Braves slipped behind in the opening exchanges and Bays romped to a 65-40 lead by half time and reached the 100-point plateau before the end of the third quarter.

Five players hit double figures for Bays with Ken Kirzinger scoring 31 points, Wayne Andrews adding 28, Craig Higgins contributing 26, Tim Sinnott firing 16 and Kelly Dukeshire hitting for 14.

Oak Bay was missing the services of both Jay Loukas and Wayne Bryan.

At Claremont, both teams held commanding leads. Demons led by as much as 13 points in the opening quarter but Spartans were ahead by 12 going into the finial quarter and held off against the surging Dunsmuir squad.

In other games, Mt. Douglas Ramblers topped visiting Esquimalt Dockettes 39-22, Claremont downed visiting Dunsmuir 45-10 and Belmont Tomahawks bounced host Oak Bay, 27-12.

Sandy Lewis, a six-foot-one Grade 12 student, led the Tigers with 27 points and Louise Harrison, who played last season at Powell River, added 22 points. Victoria High led 35-16 at the half.

In girls' exhibition games tonight, Spectrum and Reynolds play touring Tasmanian teams at 6:30 and 8 in the Reynolds gymnasium.

DENIAL AND CONFIRMATION IN RUMORED FLAME SALE

ATLANTA (AP) — Tom Cousins, chairman of the board of Atlanta Flames, denied a report Tuesday that the National Hockey League club would be sold to businessman Earl Thomas.

Atlanta radio station WGST reported earlier Tuesday that Thomas was flying to Atlanta for talks with Cousins about purchasing the club for a reported $5.2 million.

"I have no appointment with Mr. Thomas," said Cousins. "I have never met Mr. Thomas and have not been contacted by him and I'm the guy they have to talk to. The story is not true."

Thomas, 66, is chairman of the board of Thomas Industries Inc., a holding company with 32 separate corporations and 157 divisions. It has executive offices in Miami, corporate offices in Worthington and Ohio and world offices in Atlanta.

Thomas's son, Kingsley Thomas, a senior vice-president of the firm, however, indicated his father will buy the Flames.

"This broke two days early," he said from Ohio. "We will work out the details at a Thursday meeting in Atlanta with these people (Flames)."

Kingsley Thomas would not say whether the franchise would remain in Atlanta if it were purchased.

In Miami, the elder Thomas would neither confirm or deny the report.

The Flames have had financial difficulties recently with members of the team taking a voluntary pay cut in December. Governor George Busbee, Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson and local businessmen helped the club meet its mid-December payroll.

Cousins admitted the Flames are seeking more financing but said he was not considering selling the team.

The expansion club has been in Atlanta since 1972 and made the playoffs in two of the four previous seasons.

Gare Suffers Disc Problem

BUFFALO (CP) — Buffalo Sabres said Monday that right-winger Danny Gare has been admitted to hospital for an indefinite period to undergo treatment of a disc problem that has bothered him since the September Canada Cup hockey series.

A 50-goal scorer in his second year with the Sabres last season, the 22-year-old Gare had appeared in only 17 of 37 games during the current National Hockey League season, scoring four goals and six assists.

Bakers, formerly Victoria Junior Men, twice had six-point leads in the second half before succumbing to the pressure in the final minutes of the game.

John Campbell fired 14 points to spark James Bay while Mike Morrill added 13 and Jim Merz contributed 12. Ben Shotten and Bob Vanderford, each with 10 points, were the top Bakery marksmen.

Dune Buggy Roll Fatal to Pitcher

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Veteran relief pitcher Danny Frisella of Milwaukee Brewers was killed in a weekend dune buggy accident near Phoenix.

Frisella, 30, who led the Brewers in saves last season, was riding in the buggy with another man when it rolled over, authorities in Arizona said.

The other man escaped serious injury.

Defence Dismissal Motion Denied in Baseball Trial

CHICAGO (AP) — Judge Frank J. McGarr of U.S. District Court denied a motion for dismissal by the defence Tuesday after lawyers for Charles O. Finley had concluded their presentation in Finley's $3.5-million suit against baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Irvin B. Nathan, one of Kuhn's lawyers, made the motion for dismissal because of a "lack of evidence." The move was denied as was another motion requesting that Boston Red Sox be removed as defendants in the case.

Finley has filed the suit because Kuhn negated deals last summer in which Finley, owner of Oakland A's, sold outfielder Joe Rudi and pitcher Rollie Fingers to the Red Sox for $1 million each and pitcher Vida Blue to New York Yankees for $1.5 million.

Finley's chief counsel, Neil Papiano, attempted to bring into evidence newspaper articles and interviews concerning public opinion to the constant objection of the lawyers for the defence.

After Papiano concluded his presentation, McGarr said he was not concerned about public comment of what is in the best interest of baseball.

"This is not the issue in the case before me," said the judge. "The commissioner probably has the power to decide what is or isn't in the best interest of baseball. It becomes a legal issue only if there is capricious abuse of his discretion in an area where he has authority."

Pro Tour Opens In Miller Land

PHOENIX (AP) — The 10-month, $9.4 million pro golf tour inaugurates its 1977 season this week with, as usual, Johnny Miller the man to beat in the $200,000 Phoenix Open.

Miller, one of the first of the field of 147 to arrive for this kickoff event which starts Thursday, has won five of the six tour events played in Arizona in the last three years.

Three times in Phoenix and Tucson Opens he's had a score of 61, once flirting with the untouched 50s. He won the 1975 Phoenix Open with a score of 260, the lowest 72-hole total of 260, the lowest 72-hole more than two decades.

The Phoenix Open is the first event in a 40-plus tournament schedule that offers the biggest amount of prize money ever.

Most of the familiar faces along with 27 newcomers will compete in a schedule that runs through the end of October and offers a record purse. The exact total hasn't been set because a couple of tournaments at the end of the year still are under negotiation.

Mulcahy Rejoins Scorps

Victoria Scorpions may be without the services of another of their regulars for this season's provincial senior men's basketball playdowns.

High-scoring guard Brian MacKenzie may be out of town and holidaying in Europe when the B.C. playdowns begin here Feb. 20, it was disclosed this week.

Scorpions earlier this season lost the services of forward Dave Morgan, who suffered a severe ankle injury in December.

It is unlikely that Morgan will play again during the regular season and team manager Tom Child indicated Tuesday that MacKenzie could also miss the balance of the schedule.

Morgan is third in team scoring with 190 points while MacKenzie is fourth with 181. Guard Bill Robinson, a Team Canada player in the 1976 Olympics, leads the club with 257 points and an 18.4 average. Bob Burrows, former Dogwood League scoring champion, is second with 197 points and a 14.6 average.

Scorpions will host North Shore Mountaineers of the Dogwood League Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at Mount Douglas High School and Sunday at the University of Victoria old gym at 12:30 p.m.

Six-foot, seven-inch Dave Mulcahy has rejoined the club following an extensive holiday and should provide the Scorpions with more rebounding strength. Mike Bishop currently leads rebounds at present with 140.

Scorpions have won nine games and lost seven this year.

Winter Wildlife Feeding More Problem Than Cure

Many big game animals and other wild creatures starve to death as a matter of course during most British Columbia winters.

Most of the time this natural cropping of the populations occurs far from human sight, but during severe winters heavy snows can drive the starving animals close to towns and highways where their plight is easily noticed.

At this time, well-meaning but misguided people tend to call on the fish and wildlife branch to help by feeding the starving animals.

Ian Smith, a branch biologist in charge of inventory for the province, outlined the pitfalls to the practice of winter feeding in a recent paper.

"If winter feeding is initiated only after evidence of starvation is found, such programs often have the surprising result of hastening the death of the animals that were supposed to be saved. And if such programs are run on a long-term basis, they generally create more problems than they solve," explains Smith.

The main reason for the fact that feeding often leads to a quicker death lies with the extremely-specialized digestive system found in ruminants such as deer, moose and elk.

These animals can't change foods quickly because they rely on specific types of micro-organisms to do most of their digestive work. Thus, an animal feeding on bunchgrass tends to have large numbers of micro-organisms specific to that form of food within its rumen (a part of the stomach) while the other types of micro-organisms tend to die away.

Unfortunately, the animals aren't aware of this and happily eat whatever is available.

"If the animal eats relatively small amounts of such changed feed, no harm is done because the system has a chance to adjust to the new diet gradually. But if the animal suddenly switches completely from one diet to another, the result is usually a completely-blocked digestive system," says Smith.

While the animal may have a full stomach, it has no way of digesting the food. And the full stomach also prevents the animal from obtaining more beneficial food, or even utilizing it's remaining fat reserves.

Since feeding them more of the same food to which they are accustomed is often extremely difficult, most successful feeding of animals involves a program starting early in winter and continuing through to the following spring.

But even a successful program, such as that being carried out with the Yellowstone elk near Jackson Hole, Wyoming, has problems.

Disease is a constant danger, the elk have destroyed all the best browse plants around the permanent feeding grounds and there are indications their summer range is being overused. This last factor could compound the food problem and lead to further deterioration of the range.

Special hunts, both by park rangers and to a limited extent by special permit holders, have to be organized to keep the elk herd from over-running its food supply.

On the plus side, this successful application of winter feeding has maintained a herd for over half a century.

But the problems of feeding a herd-oriented species such as elk are small compared to those encountered while attempting to feed a relatively scattered species such as deer.

Distributing the food is not only harder, but feeding can lead to an abundance of breeding animals the following spring that would add to the number of mouths to be fed the following winter.

"And even if more than enough food was provided, it is still characteristic of big-game animals that they tend to prefer their natural fodder to man's offerings, so there would be no way to avoid the destruction of the range," said Smith.

"So long as the winter feed program continued, as it has at Jackson Hole, this would not be a critical problem. But if for any reason the food was ever withdrawn one year, the animals would be much worse off then they were before the program was ever started."

Winter feeding is a poor solution, both economically and from the point of view of the animals themselves. The fed animals are no longer completely wild and they lose some of their appeal as a result of the domestication process.

But, in some cases, it is better than the alternative — severe depletion or extinction of the population.

Smith pointed out that wildlife managers are trying to provide for critical winter range so that herds "will not be dependent on handouts."

However, since many of these key ranges are located at lower elevations, they have suffered disruption by highways, logging, subdivisions and flooding for hydro-electric development in many parts of British Columbia.

"Often it is hard to justify saving such land 'just for wildlife' — but if we don't, wildlife could be depleted over extremely wide areas," Smith warns.

There is hope for the future under the folio system of resource-use planning in this province — providing budgetary restraints don't hamstring it's implementation.

Mad Stork Is Ready FOR TARKENTON CHASE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There is a theory floating around the Super Bowl scene — that Fran Tarkenton of Minnesota is going to run Oakland's line ragged, then pass the pants off the Raiders.

"Well, I don't know about that," says Otis Sistrunk, one of Oakland's three defensive linemen whose job, in part, will be to catch the Vikings' scrambling quarterback.

"I think we may have a few surprises in store for him."

Tarkenton, too, has reservations about the widely held view that his ability to move laterally, combined with the three-man Oakland line rather than the usual four, will make the Raiders especially vulnerable.

"What matters isn't the formation, it's the guys who are in it, their ability, their desire," says Tarkenton, a veteran of 16 years in the National Football League. "There is no mystery to defence, only to how well they play."

The reason the Raiders' three-man line installed by coach John Madden because of a wave of injuries in the preseason won't make a major difference, Tarkenton points out, is the presence of a fourth linebacker, who will more than likely be blitzing in at h im most of the day.

And that fourth linebacker, says Sistrunk, could create problems for Tarkenton:

"He won't know how often that linebacker will be coming — and more important, he won't know which one'll be coming."

One of those linebackers is the Mad Stork, the angular Ted Hendricks. He's looking forward to a few footraces with Tarkenton.

"I can remember more than a few games when he was running back and forth, back and forth, with me right after him," he says.

"I tell you, there are few things more frustrating than chasing that man all over the joint, then seeing him get a pass off.

"Ah, but it's oh, so sweet when you catch him."

A's Share Lead

There's a traffic jam at the top of the South Island Big Six Hockey League and it doesn't show any signs of breaking up.

Victoria Athletics moved into a tie with Chemainus Blues Tuesday night by coming from behind for a 4-4 tie with Victoria Maple Leafs. Athletics could have taken the lead with a victory while the Leafs could have shared top place if they had triumphed.

As matters now stand, Chemainus and the A's each have 27 points, Maple Leafs 26 and Western Home Buckaroos are waiting in the wings with 24. Chemainus has a game in hand over the A's.

Chris Riddell scored three goals and assisted on Ron McNeil's tally to lead the Maple Leafs. Ross Swanton, with two, Dave Parenteau and Gord Neilson scored for the A's.

INDIA'S PERCH PERILOUS

CALCUTTA (AP) — England was on the threshold of a second successive victory against India today at the end of the fourth day's play in the second cricket test.

Facing an overdraft of 166 runs to avoid an innings defeat, Indian was perilously perched at 145 runs for seven wickets as England, under the inspired leadership of Tony Greig, was poised to score another win following its innings and 25-run victory in the first test at New Delhi two weeks ago.

Brijesh Patel with 48 and Erapalli Prasann on 12 were battling to avoid an inning defeat when stumps were drawn for the day two minutes before the scheduled close due to poor light.

Earlier, bolstered by Greig's 103 and an aggressive 52 by Chris Old, England took its previous day's total of 285 for six wickets to 321 all out to gain a first-innings lead of 166 runs. India was all out for 155 in its first knock.

MORRIS PONDERS HOCKEY FUTURE

EDMONTON (CP) — Peter Morris of Edmonton Oilers, who suffered a fractured skull Oct. 28 in a World Hockey Association game with Phoenix Roadrunners, has come home from Springfield of the American Hockey Association and probably will retire, he said Monday.

The left winger sent to Springfield three days after Christmas to play his way back into condition, stayed there only three days.

"I don't know if I want to play any more this season," he said. "I'm kind of mixed up right now. I'm going to wait a week to decide whether I'llq uit for the season."

Coach Bep Guidolin said Morris, 21, told him he was concerned about another injury. Morris, who played his junior hockey with Victoria Cougars before joining Edmonton as a rookie professional last season, has been knocked out five times in his career.

Aeros Down Oilers

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oilers saw evidence Tuesday that their search for accomplished scorers might be over, but they still wound up on the short end of a 5-3 decision to Houston Aeros in one of four World Hockey Association games.

The Oilers got a first-period power-play goal from Wayne Connelly, one of the top scorers in WHA history. But two late goals gave the Aeros their victory and enabled them to stay ahead of Winnipeg Jets in the race for second place in the Western Division.

The Jets defeated Indianapolis Racers 2-1 on Bobby Guindon's third-period marker and remained one point behind the Aeros.

In other games, Marc Tardif paced Quebec Nordiques to a 5-3 victory over New England Whalers and former Oiler Tim Sheehy tallied twice in the third period as Birmingham Bulls downed Phoenix Roadrunners 8-5.

Connelly, acquired from Calgary on Saturday and playing only his second game for the Oilers, scored his sixth goal of the season to give Edmonton a 2-1 first-period lead. Also scoring for Edmonton in the first period was Bill Flett, acquired in December from the National Hockey League Atlanta Flames.

Edmonton, which retained fourth spot in the Western Division, got shaky goaltending from Dave Dryden, who blocked only 17 shots. He gave up a 50-foot shorthanded goal to Cam Connor to put the Aeros ahead 3-2 in the third period after being beaten by Ted Taylor on a shot to the short side for the tying goal.

Edmonton meets the touring Soviet team tonight.

At Quebec City, Tardif bounced back from a 10-game layoff caused by an injured knee and collected the first and last goals. He also assisted on goals by Christian Bordeleau and Pierre Roy. Jim Dorey scored the other Quebec goal

Junior Squash Tourney

Play begins Friday at 5 p.m. and continues through Saturday and Sunday in the annual Pacific Northwest Junior Squash championships.

Mark Alger of Tacoma, the No. 2 juvenile in the United States and Bryce Harding of Seattle, the No. 3 player, will lead the American entries in the men's section.

Victoria's Dave Cox, formerly Canada's No. 2 juvenile, now B.C.'s No. 1 junior and a recent winner in the Pacific Coast championships and the Alberta Open, is expected to be a strong contender in the under-19 division.

Canada's current No. 2 juvenile, Andy BacDonald of Van Vancouver, is the top seed in the under-17 category. Blair Krueger of Victoria, No. 3 nationally, is the second seed.

Andre Levey of the Racquet Club, B.C.'s top junior women's player, is ranked first in the women's division. Cathy Covernton of Vancouver and Cathy Rose of Seattle are expected to be the main threats. In the under-15 event Victoria's Dale Couch, 12, is seeded No. 2 behind Vancouver's Eric Barklep.

Spectators are invited to watch the matches without charge.

Crosby Tourney Drops Spyglass

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — The Shore Course of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club will be used instead of Spyglass Hill during the 36th Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament Jan. 20-23, tournament officials have announced.

The switch was made after officials learned the greens were being renovated at the Spyglass Hill course. Two other courses used during the tournament, Cypress Point and Pebble Beach, are unaffected by the decision.

Hunt Continues For NHL Boss

TORONTO (CP) — The search for a replacement for National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell is resuming and league governors expect to name his successor by June, Jacques Courtois, president of Montreal Canadiens, said Tuesday.

A five-member committee suspended its search for a replacement for the 73-year-old league president in April after he and others were charged with "illegally giving or agreeing to give" benefits of $95,000 to Senator Louis Giguere in exchange for the senator's influence in obtaining a lease extension on the duty-free shop at Montreal's Dorval airport granted to Sky Shops Export Ltd.

Campbell is a former officer of the Sky Shops company and the case is still in the preliminary stages. The last hearing was Sept. 27 and no date has been set for resumption.

"Mr. Campbell's personal problems were the reason for the committee slowdown in finding a suitable replacement," Courtois, a member of the selection committee, said in an interview. "In no way did we want to make it appear we had lost faith in Mr. Campbell."

New Tournament

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — The World Open golf tournament at the Pinehurst Country Club will be replaced by a richer event next August. Donald Collett, president and executive director of the World Golf Hall of Fame in Pinehurst, said the Hall of Fame Classic, a new tournament will be the 72-hole, $250,000 tournament next Aug. 25-28.

Soccer Season Extension Won't Disrupt Cup Plans

LONDON (AP) — The English soccer season, disrupted by weeks of snow and frost, may be extended into June.

But England's preparations for vital World Cup qualifying games will not be affected. The English League said Tuesday that despite the pile-up of fixtures it will still allow clubs to postpone games to allow England's stars to get together for training.

England faces an uphill fight to beat Italy for first place in Group 2 of the European Zone.

More than 100 league games have been postponed because of wintery weather. To get them all fitted in the league will have to extend the season, at present scheduled to end May 14.

But Alan Hardaker, league secretary, said: "We have given the Football Association (FA) an undertaking that players will be released to take part in training for the weekend before each international game. We will stand by that agreement, whatever difficulties might be caused by the pile-up of fixtures."

The wintery weather worried a lot of England fans, because it is only in the last 18 months that the league has co-operated with the FA in preparing for international matches.

Sir Alf Ramsey, the manager who piloted England to its World Cup triumph in 1966, could never be sure of getting his team together until two or three days before an international.

His successor, Don Revie, is able to assemble his team the weekend before each match. Clubs which have two or more players on international duty are allowed to postpone league games.

England's next World Cup qualifying game is scheduled for March 30, away to little Luxembourg. England's aim will be to score as many goals as possible—in the event it finishes level with Italy at the end of the year and top place in the group is decided by goals.

The crunch could come next Nov. 16, when Italy visits Wembley. The Italians won the first match with England, 2-0, in Rome last November.

Before that Italy has to face Finland home and away. England has already won both its games against Finland.

Meanwhile the English League program is interrupted again this weekend, this time by the start of the English Cup. The knockout tournament has reached the third round, the stage at which the First and Second Division teams enter the fray.

Strange things happen in the Cup, especially in freak wintry weather conditions such as Britain is getting at the moment.

Middlesbrough, First Division team managed by former England World Cup star Jack Charlton, has to visit Wimbledon, a small-time club of part-time professionals with a past reputation for giant-killing acts in Cup play.

Matlock, another obscure team which has reached the third round for the first time, has to visit second Division Carlisle. Two other clubs from outside the league, Kettering and Northwick, are trying their luck against Fourth Division sides.

Other intriguing games are on the program. West Ham, fighting to stay in the First Division, is at home to Bolton, pressing for promotion from the Second Division. Southampton, Second Division team which sensationally won the Cup last season, is at home to Second Division leaders Chelsea.

The draw pitted First Division against each other in five games, so at least five First Division teams must fall at the first hurdle.

These games are Everton vs. Stoke, Ipswich vs. Bristol City, Leeds vs. Norwich, Leicester vs. Aston Villa and Manchester City vs. West Bromwich.

Ron Wilson, Lovat Lead Bike Trials

Ron Wilson and Eric Lovat were the slickest cyclists Sunday as members of the Victoria Motorcycle Club staged their annual winter trials at the club property on Happy Valley Road.

Wilson earned top honors in the expert class, notching a tally of 50 points under the reverse system of scoring. Gary Nordstrom (65 points) was second and third place was shared by Joe Brown and Gary Argyle, each with 113.

Lovat was the leader in the novice class, posting a score of 38 points to finish ahead of Greg Lohrman (60) and Michael Boothroyd (79).

70-CENT LIGHTER WORTH HER LIFE

KUNGSBACKA, Sweden — The cigarette lighter cost Margit Johansson 70 cents and she should have thrown it away last week, but now she'll cherish it because it saved her life.

The 43-year-old housewife was on her way home when her car skidded on an icy road, overturned and landed in the freezing Kungsbacka River.

As the car sank through the thin ice and water rushed through a broken side window, Mrs. Johansson struggled to free herself from her safety belt.

"I tried with all my strength to open it but it was stuck and I had no tool to cut it," she said in interview Tuesday. "The water rose quickly and I thought I was done for — I could not even signal for help because the horn didn't work.

"Suddenly I remembered the cigarette lighter I kept in my purse."

She found the purse but it was soaked "and I didn't have much hope the lighter would work. But it did and I could burn through the belt and get out throuth a window in the last seconds before the car was completely flooded."

WOMANHOOD'S GLORY NOT HERE

LOS ANGELES — Two of television's top stars and an opera singer headed the annual list of "Worst Dressed" women announced today by designer Mr. Blackwell.

"For 1977, let's have attractively dressed women and happy men," the designer said in releasing his list of the women who have violated fashion's prime purpose — to glorify womanhood."

No. 1 on this year's list was Louise Lasser, star of Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman, who Blackwell described as "last summer's tumble weed, tumble weed."

Also gaining his displeasure were:

Opera singer Marilyn Niska — "Carmen dressed like Sadie Thompson."

Angie Dickinson — "The policewoman that has caught everything but fashion."

Ann Miller — "A 1937 screen test."

Lee Radziwill — "Did Lee's designer go down with the Titanic?"

Nancy Walker — "Vacuum cleaners have better covers."

Dinah Shore — "Wild again, beguiled again and constantly contrived again."

Blackwell said his idea of "fabulous fashion independents" were Judy Collins, Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Vivian Reed, Jacqueline Bissett, Princes Caroline, Mary Tyler Moore and Marthe Keller.

Jailers Conned

IONIA, Mich. — After an extensive search for two county jail prisoners who officials said escaped early Tuesday, the missing men were found. They never left the jail.

County deputies and city police had used tracking dogs to try to locate Lester Williams, 19, and William Bennett, 21.

As the search continued, two deputies remained in the jail to look around. Deputies Ronald Speckin and Charles Stackman said they noticed a door in the ceiling and decided to investigate.

Indians Eye White Graves

TORONTO — An Indian group opposed to archeological excavations at an Indian burial ground near Grimsby, Ont., plans to start digging at a cemetery near Toronto where Indians and whites are buried.

Doug Pine, leader of the Toronto chapter of the American Indian Movement, said Tuesday he will apply for a licence to make an archeological dig at a cemetery where whites were buried following a skirmish with an Indian settlement.

"We expect to get arrested when we start digging," he said. "We want to show that the law doesn't apply for Indians as it does for whites."

JAMESTOWN, N.D. — For a class project on what it takes to be a parent, 57 high school students each took care of a raw egg for a week. Most decided they weren't ready to set up a nest of their own.

"I started getting sick and tired of being tied down," one student at Jamestown High School wrote when the experiment was over. "I value the fact I don't have a real baby right now."

Of the nearly five dozen "babies," two didn't make it through the week. One was eaten by a dog, and the other was punctured by a dart. Their "parents" had to adopt another or arrange a funeral.

Home economics teacher Joan Nayes, 46, who guided the project in this central North Dakota farming community, said: "I thought it was a fantastic way to teach the responsibility and commitment of being a parent. An egg is very fragile, and so are babies. They learned about 24 hours a day with a child."

ASPEN, Colo. — Singer Claudine Longet visibly tensed at statements by prospective jurors who described a souring love affair between the French-born entertainer and pro skier Vladimir "Spider" Sabich.

"I think she probably did it," said Jonathan Gardner, a bearded restaurant worker. "It seems like it has already been determined for a lot of people and I have been influenced by the media and the talk going around."

Miss Longet, wearing a full-length rabbit coat and flanked by her attorneys in the chilly courtroom, glared at Gardner and became increasingly solemn as several jurors indicated they believed she was guilty of felony manslaughter.

She faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $30,000 fine if convicted of the manslaughter charge in the shooting of Sabich last March 21 at the mountain chalet they shared in Aspen.

SEATTLE, Wash. — Hundreds of farmers in the northwestern United States are hoping that an Indian Moslem planning to buy millions of dollars of U.S. food for poor Islamic countries is the financially backed humanitarian he says he is.

Mohammed Abdul Gafoor, a 59-year-old native of India who lives in Paris, has convinced at least one U.S. agriculture representative he will have loans from Arab banks to buy wheat, corn, soybeans and beef—perhaps a half billion tons.

NEWHART QUITS TV COMEDY SHOW

LOS ANGELES—Comedian Bob Newhart said Tuesday he will quit his CBS television comedy series at the end of the season.

Newhart did not give a reason for bowing out of the still-successful television show, now in its fifth year.

He is the second CBS star to announce retirement from a series. Mary Tyler Moore, who also owns the Newhart show, is quitting her show this year.

"This is no ploy, no device for negotiation," Newhart said in a statement. "I am absolutely sincere about leaving the series at the end of the production this year and CBS has been notified."

Newhart, appearing now at the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas, said he wants his decision known by the network at this time so it will have adequate time to replace the half-hour comedy series.

'Punk' Rockers Shock Onlookers

LONDON — Four-letter words flew at London's Heathrow Airport on Tuesday as Britain's most notorious rock group, the Sex Pistols, left for Amsterdam.

Airline staff said the group shocked onlookers by vomiting and spitting in the terminal building and using obscene language.

"The group are the most revolting people I have seen in my life," said a check-in deck girl at the KLM Airlines counter.

"One of the group was sick in the corridor leading to the aircraft," she told reporters. "He was sick again in a rubbish bin while others were spitting on the floor and at each other.

"The group called us filthy names and insulted everyone in sight."

A passenger, Freida van Roiden of Rotterdam, said: "I've never heard of the Sex Pistols before, but I certainly won't forget them in a hurry. They were the most degenerate bunch of small-minded children I have ever seen."

The group, exponents of so-called "punk rock" which exploits outrageous behavior on stage and off, were flying to the Netherlands for three concerts.

The Sex Pistols — including lead singer Johnny Rotten — caused a rumpus last month when they used explicit four-letter words on a live national television program. Their subsequent country-wide tour was a flop as nine cities and towns reacted by cancelling their appearances.

IMF TO REVIEW PROGRESS

U.K. Loan Tied to Economic Recovery

Times News Service

The International Monetary Fund has given formal approval to a $3.9 billion loan to Britain, but tied it to the country's economic performance over the next two years.

Britain will draw $1.16 billion immediately, but no more than a total of $2.26 billion in the first 12 months.

The arrangement calls for Britain to observe various "performance clauses related to the program for strengthening the United Kingdom's economy," the IMF said.

Before Jan. 16, 1978 — or before the final $1.64 billion of the loan can be drawn — the IMF is to conduct another review of the progress of the British economy.

The British government, in a "letter of intent" to the IMF on Dec. 15, spelled out a comprehensive program of spending cuts and borrowing reductions designed to restore a degree of confidence in the pound. This followed weeks of analysis of the British economy by a special IMF team.

It was also announced Monday that to provide enough resources for the loan to Britain; nine countries would put up $3.3 billion in their own currencies, supplementing what is already on hand in the IMF.

Eight of these countries are participants in the so-called General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB), a group of IMF nations that provides main support for the agency. The nations, and the amounts they will advance, are: the U.S. $1.1 billion; West Germany, $10 million; Japan, $644 million; Netherlands, $122 million; Canada, $64 million; France, $58 million; Belgium, $52 mijlon; Sweden, $23 million.

In addition, Switzerland, a non-IMF member, will loan $348 million to the Fund.

Great Britain has other loans outstanding from the IMF totalling $2.78 billion.

Britain's Labor government now has embarked on a medium-term program of national recovery which it hopes will set the country on the road to growth and prosperity over the next two or three years.

After that, the big revenues of its North Sea oil — expected to approach £5 billion (about $8 billion U.S.) annually in the 1980s — might transform Britain's economic position.

Although some members of the opposition Conservative party, led by Margaret Thatcher, fear a slide into socialism, many Britons predict a change of mood in 1977 by organized labor, often blamed for what foreigners call "the English disease."

Trade unions and industry have announced a joint export drive in 1977 — the first such venture.

The unions also are likely to agree in mid-1977 to continue co-operation with the government on voluntary restraint of pay increases for another year.

Nevertheless, living standards of Britons have been falling steadily in the last two years and are likely to slide several more points in 1977.

Denis Healey, chancellor of the exchequer, predicted on New Year's Day that in the second half of 1977 "everything should be moving into place, with inflation falling from 15 per cent annualy."

PASSENGERS CRUSHED

CAIRO (UPI) — Nine persons were killed and five injured in a freak accident involving overcrowded trains on a suburban Cairo line today, a police spokesman said.

He said passengers hanging out of the doors on the two packed trains running on parallel tracks but in opposite directions were crushed when the trains passed each other a few miles south of Cairo.

EARLY MOVE ON P.R. IS UNLIKELY

WASHINGTON (AP)—Early congressional action on President Ford's proposal to make Puerto Rico the 51st state is unlikely because of opposition from congressional leaders and the possibility Ford's term in office may run out before he can submit the legislation.

Leaders of the two congressional committees with jurisdiction over legislation affecting Puerto Rico say they have no intention of holding committee hearings on Ford's proposal.

The stands by Senator Henry Jackson (Dem. Wash.) and Representative Morris Udall (Dem. Ariz.) might mean Ford's proposal would fail the first test in the congressional process: approval by committees in each chamber.

Jackson is chairman of the Senate interior committee and Udall is slated to move up to chair the equivalent House of Representatives committee. Both committees would have to approve any invitation to Puerto Rico to apply for statehood.

Further doubts about early consideration of the proposal developed Monday when White House press secretary Ron Nessen said the legislation embodying the Ford proposal might not be drafted in time for Ford to submit it to Congress before the president leaves office Jan. 20.

If the legislation is not completed, Nessen said Ford probably would try to make his point in the State of the Union message he plans to deliver to a joint session of Congress about Jan. 12.

It would then be up to the Carter administration, Nessen said. Carter has been cool to Ford's suggestion.

OAK BAY INAUGURAL

Smith Sees Moderate Tax Hike

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Oak Bay ratepayers should be hit with only a moderate tax increase this year.

"The budget goal will be to shoot as closely as we can to holding the general mill rate down to, at worst, a minimal increase," Mayor Brian Smith said in his inaugural address read to council Tuesday night by Ald. Doug Watts. Smith is out of town.

"This objective may require some reduction in service. It will be our duty to ensure that if there is any such reduction in service, it is not an essential service.

"On these lines I hope that we will be able to increase the frequency of our garbage pickup in the year ahead."

Later in the council meeting, municipal administrator Stewart Fleming presented a provisional budget draft showing the combined general municipal purposes and debt purposes mill rate up 2.84 mills, an increase in expenditure of 5.8 per cent. This included expanding weekly garbage collection to four months from two months.

A full provisional budget will be presented to council Jan. 17 and the final budget will be adopted in the spring when council prunes projected expenditures.

Mayor Smith said he is "delighted" with the progress the Greater Victoria school board is making "with a view to reducing expenditures and service, which they must do in face of their shrinking school population."

But even if the school board can hold its budget and mill rate down, people could still end up paying mill rate increases for school tax.

"This bad situation could be brought about with the province simply reducing its percentage share in school operating costs," he said.

"The province reduced its share in 1976 over the preceding year from 44 per cent to 36.7 per cent. That reduction pyramided a school board budget increase of almost 19 per cent to a school tax increase of 27.5 per cent, which increase had to be borne by local taxpayers, and collected by the municipality."

He said further educational burdens must be carried by the general taxpayer and not with the property taxpayer.

Smith said restraint in 1977 is vital because Oak Bay sees no increase in operating revenues, the general state of the economy and repayment of debts to build community facilities.

He said the creation of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, to bargain collectively for managament among local municipalities, and the federal Anti-Inflation Board regulations "should have a sobering restraint in the wage bargaining which takes place annually and incessantly with the public employees.

"Obviously also we must work towards two-and three-year collective agreements. Wage settlements must bear some relationship to the growth of the economy and the rate of inflation."

He said accreditation as bargaining agent for the GVLRA "allows municipal governments to stand together and pool their expertise and skills. It also prevents some of the rampant whip-sawing that has been going on in this area in collective bargaining."

McKENZIE IGNORED

A two-paragraph letter from Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie got short shrift at Oak Bay council Tuesday night.

He said he read a news article about a letter "from a Mr. Stavdal which opposed amalgamation of the four core municipalities and a comment by Ald. Goult that the letter 'expresses the views of this council'."

It would be appreciated if you could explain Oak Bay council's specific reason(s) for opposng amalgamation under the auspices of the Capital Regional Board."

Goult told council "I understand" McKenzie is an alderman in Victoria and perhaps Oak Bay's representative on the regional board, Ald. Shirley Dowell, could "take him politely aside and give him the facts of life."

"I'll be pleased," said Dowell.

Goult said he didn't believe McKenzie's letter merited a reply, and council voted to simply receive and file it.

Pump Location Up to Region

The final decision on a sewage pump site in south Oak Bay rests with the Capital Regional Board, Mayor Brian Smith said Tuesday night.

"The ultimate decision on the pumping station, that is whether it is needed and if so, where it goes, rests legally with the regional board," he said in his inaugural speech to council read in his absence by Ald. Doug Watts.

"You council established a sewage treatment advisory committee, which will be reporting to the council early in the new year, so that the council can make recommendations to the regional board."

Committee chairman Ald. John Goult told council later that the special committee will meet next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the municipal hall when it expects to receive a consultant's report on a possible new outfall in Enterprise Channel, between McMicking Point and Trial Island off south Oak Bay.

McMicking Point is the site of the existing outfall which serves Oak Bay. However, the regional board has started construction of an expanded outfall at Clover Point in the city with plans to divert Oak Bay's sewage by a land connection to be discharged at Clover Point rather than McMicking Point.

The board has proposed that a pump station needed to push Oak Bay's sewage over Gonzales Hill be built at the east end of Shoal Bay, but this produced a storm of protest from local residents which prompted Oak Bay to appoint its advisory committee.

Smith said "there is proper concern in the municipality that if a pumping station is found to be necessary, it does not become a community nuisance or eyesore."

Council voted to send to its advisory committee:

—A letter from Elgin Neish, 2409 Currie, saying that an existing pump station at Currie and Transit is a health hazard because of lack of proper venting of sewage gases;

—A letter from Capt. John Horne, 637 Beach, saying that a simplified pump house without parking and service area can be built and be substantially or totally concealed under the roadway in several sites being considered in the Transit-Beach Drive area;

—A letter from Brian Travers-Smith, 590 Transit, opposing location of the pump house in a gully halfway along the east side of the 500-block Transit;

—A petition signed by 72 persons opposed to allowing Earn Street to be used for the site of the pump station.

ESQUIMALT INAUGURAL

Young Hits Socred Government For Lack of Financial Help

Failure of the provincial government to provide greater revenue aid to municipalites was cited by Esquimalt Mayor Art Young in his inaugural address Tuesday.

After the council's first meeting of the year Young pointed out the Social Credit election promise to pick up local service costs that are not related to property had fallen through.

At current levels, the municipality will find it difficult this year to meet the costs of such people-oreinted services as schools, libraries and welfare, without a loss of service elsewhere Young suggested.

In the coming 12 months council should give priority to construction of a proposed $800,000 public safety building as the first permanent and separate home for police and fire departments, Young said.

Land for the structure has been set aside opposite the municipal hall on Park Street.

Among council's 1976 achievements mentioned in Young's speech were acquisition of a snorkel platform for the fire department and the preparation of a residential density study leading to a new community plan and reduced density for about 35 acres.

But building development suffered and the value of new construction permits dropped to less than $10 million from $12.8 million in 1975.

Young said he expects a further significant drop this year.

Council was told of a proposal to provide a "small sum" to set up a municipal archive, the only new spending mentioned.

A provisional budget of $2.27 million—up $142,000 or 7 per cent—was passed to enable day-to-day operations until the annual budget is prepared in April.

Its major items are $760,000 advance to the school district; $495,000 for parks and recreation and $300,000 for public safety.

STUDENT FEES TO BE AIRED

Tuition fee increases will be discussed when student leaders meet with Education Minister Pat McGeer Monday, says University of Victoria Alma Mater Society vice-president Brian Gardiner.

UVic president Dr. Howard Petch said earlier this week that "fairly substantial" fee increases would be necessary in light of rising costs and no additional provincial grants.

The first, "Danger Signals You Should Watch", could help save you thousands of dollars in home repairs. This May Be Year Food Grumblings Turn Into a Roar

OTTAWA (FP) — The protests are muted and disconnected now. Collectively they add up to little more than a murmur as far as government is concerned.

But 1977 may be the year when consumer unhappiness over food grows to a loud, coordinated and continuing roar.

The national heartburn over food prices, nutritional quality, the lack of a national food policy, junk foods, vested interests in agriculture, and the whipping the poor get from food chains, is being fanned by a small group of activists who want to stage a Canada Food Week next month.

The comic opera aspects — they are trying to run the week, Feb. 11-19, with a budget of about $7,000 — would be laughable except for the kind of moral and support in kind they are picking up.

Backers include the National Farmers Union, Canadian Labour Congress, consumer associations, academics, ecologists, the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs.

The keynote is informality. The steering committee of 25, based in Ottawa, doesn't even have a permanent chairman, according to Ken Rubin, a public interest advocate who is one of the members.

And the idea grew out of adversity. Canada Food Week is the stepchild of efforts made earlier by Anthony Gray, executive director of the Canadian Association of Social Workers, to focus national organizations on the need for consumer input in food policy development.

Gray is now chairman of the advisory committee for the Food Week forces.

They have a $5,000 LIP grant which is paying for two temporary staff members. And they have another $1,000 from the department of consumer and corporate affairs for printing and publishing a four-issue newsletter they are mailing to about a 1,000 groups across Canada.

But on top of those meagre resources, the Food Week people are getting a lot of donated time, effort and help with mailings, Rubin said in an interview.

That support is keeping the idea alive, if not flourishing. About 20 groups across Canada have already put together ideas for food Week.

In Winnipeg, the Agassiz Food Co-op is considering supermarket tours to point out to people such things as interlocking corporate ownership and the lack of nutrition in some popular food items.

Christmas leftovers? Try turkey pie

Turkey Pie Promised So Here's the Recipe

Mary Moore

By MARY MOORE

Before Christmas I gave you turkey stuffing and roasting methods.

At the tail end of the column there was a note saying I would be giving you a recipe for a Turkey Pie to utilize any turkey leftover from Christmas.

Here it is and I served it at a guest dinner for five and enjoyed it.

The recipe should be filed carefully and used any time of year especially since cooked chicken as a substitute for turkey would be just as good — maybe better.

TURKEY PIE

Filling:

4 brown 'n serve sausages
½ c. chopped celery
2 tbsp. chopped onion
1 envelope turkey gravy mix (see below)
½ c. plus dairy sour cream (see below)
2 tbsp. flour
2 c. diced cooked turkey meat (or chicken).

Pastry:

1 c. sifted all-purpose flour
½ tsp. salt
½ to 1 tsp. celery seed
⅓ c. shortening
1½ tbsp. cold water.

Make pastry first by cutting shortening into flour, salt and celery seeds until size of peas. Drizzle in water, tossing with fork. Pack into ball and roll out on floured board to fit top of 9" pie plate. (This is a top crust. Do not stint on the celery seeds. They are a novel and tasty addition.) Transfer pastry to piece of wax paper on a dinner plate and refrigerate.

To make filling cut sausages into ½" pieces and gently saute with the celery and onions until celery and onions are a little bit limp and sausage is barely cooked. (Do not add fat. Sausages supply sufficient.) Remove from heat and add cooked turkey or chicken. To the package of turkey gravy mix add 1 cup cold water and cook, stirring until boiling. (Note: If you do not have or cannot buy turkey gravy mix you can substitute 1 cup of your own well-flavored gravy.) Add to contents of pan. Stir 2 tablespoons flour into sour cream and stir it in too. Do not cook any more.

Turn into deep 9" pie plate. Cover with chilled crust, smoothing and pinching and pressing edges to pie plate rim. With sharp pointed knife cut 2" vents in top to allow steam to escape. Now brush top with some leftover sour cream to glaze. This gives the pie a glossy satin-smooth finish. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 45 to 50 minutes or until filling bubbles a little through gashes. Serves five.

Jon Vie Brownies

2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
2-3 cup light corn syrup
1 cup butter, softened
6 large eggs
6 squares (6 ounces) unsweetened chocolate, melted
2 cups flour, stir to aerate before measuring
2 cups pecan halves

Stir together the sugars, corn syrup and butter. Stir in eggs, one at a time, just until absorbed. Stir in chocolate, then flour, until blended. Reserve ½ cup of the nuts and stir in the rest. Turn into an ungreased jellyroll pan about 15 by 10 by 1inch. Sprinkle with reserved nuts. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 40 minutes. Place pan on wire rack until cold. Cut into bars.

Cransauce

Scandinavian cuisine inspired the flavoring.

1 pound (4 cups) fresh or frozen cranberries
2 cups sugar
2 cups dry red wine
Grated rind of 1 orange
1 cinnamon stick
¼ teaspoon ground cardamom

In a large saucepan bring all the ingredients to a boil, stirring until sugar dissolves. Boil until cranberries pop open — 5 minutes or so. Chill. Makes 1 quart.

Raw Wheat Germ Is the Best Bet

eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

"Where can we guy the 'right' kind of wheat germ?" is a question that pops up repeatedly in our mail. The readers want to know what kind of wheat germ has the best and the most vitamin E.

Basically, there are two things to watch for when you buy wheat germ the way it is made and the way it is packaged.

Defatted wheat germ is a nutritional gyp. The vitamin E is in the fat and once it's removed, the vitamin E is gone, too. Buy raw or slightly toasted wheat germ.

If the wheat germ is raw, make sure that it is fresh from the mill and that it is tightly packaged. Wheat germ is quickly oxidized when exposed to air and so this is one product that must be kept closed tightly.

If you choose the slightly toasted wheat germ, it would have been subjected to a mild heat treatment, and this destroys the enzymes that cause the oxidation of vitamin E. The seal, while still necessary, is not so crucial with the toasted products as with raw.

Packaging is important with this food unless you buy it fresh from a mill that you trust. If you buy it fresh, put it into a clean glass jar and keep it in the refrigerator. The wheat germ that you buy from a store should be packaged in a jar or a can under vacuum (you will hear a hiss when you first open it) with instructions on the label to keep refrigerated once opened.

Still another way of storing wheat germ is in a plastic bag in the refrigerator. Keep it well sealed and use it often . . . in baking, on dessert toppings such as apple crisp or oatmeal bars. Use it as breading for fish, chicken and veal, in salads and on your breakfast cereals.

We recommend using wheat germ as a natural source of vitamin E. Man's natural diet does contain plenty of all the nutrients. Today's food pattern, however, with its emphasis on convenience and processed foods, leaves us with small deficiencies in certain nutrients. For example, "100 per cent whole wheat bread or flour" is really only 95 per cent of the whole wheat. Canadian food and drug regulations allow the miller to remove 5 per cent of the weight of the bread or flour. Years ago, the oil in the wheat germ went rancid in storage and caused volumes of flour to be wasted. At that time, the government drafted the regulations to protect the farmers. Hence our 95 per cent whole wheat became 100 per cent. The anwwer is to bake your own bread from freshly ground whole wheat, purchased from a small mill in the country that you know and trust. Only few of us can get that, so you should add wheat germ to the commercial flour and bake your own bread.

Few of us do that, so a satisfactory alternative is to add wheat germ to other foods that you eat regularly, making sure that you have 1-2 tablespoons each day.

Dear Ruth and Zak:

The only vegetable that my 12-year-old boy eats is salad. Do lettuce, cucumber, celery and carrots supply enough "vegetable" nutrition in a salad or should I pressure him to peas and beans? — C.A.M., Kitchener, Ont.

Dear C.A.M.:

If he eats an abundance of salad, he probably will be alright. Remember that he needs two servings of vegetables every day plus potato and a source of vitamin C such as tomato or orange juice. One serving of salad including greens and carrots would be equivalent to one serving of vegetable. If he is a 12 year old who eats like a bunny rabbit, with heaps of salad at lunch and dinner, you needn't worry about his nutritional status.

We are concerned, however, that he is limiting his vegetables to salad and not having a chance to enjoy broccoli, cabbage, peas, squash and other vegetables. If he is a boy who likes crisp foods, perhaps you could pass these and others as raw vegetable strips or cook them very lightly a la Chinese style so that he will get a range of vegetables with the texture he enjoys. Vary the salad ingredients, using red cabbage and fresh or frozen peas. After all, variety is the spice of life — in vegetables, too.

By Lynn and Joel Rapp

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: I hope you can answer a question for me. I have a Norfolk Star Pine (Auracaria) which grew nicely for a long, long time. Then suddenly a large leaf started falling off every day. I finally put it outside in a sheltered area and since then the top part has grown a lot, although the leaves are droopy. A friend told me they were simply drooping from the weight and it was all right for them to hang down. Also, I have taken some impatiens up to hold them over. Will they start growing again if I plant them out again next spring? — Sincerely, C.B.

DEAR C.B.: What with Christmas just past, lots of Star Pine questions will probably be popping up since the Auracaria looks so much like the traditional Christmas tree and is often given as a Christmas gift plant. In fact, lots of our friends decorate theirs — whether they are regularly kept indoors or merely brought in for the holiday season. The loss of the lower branches is very common since these basically outdoor trees need lots of humidity to do their best — witness the success since you moved it outside. Our advice: Keep it outside and it should thrive and, if it's too bare at the bottom, cut it back and let its growth cycle start over again.

As for your impatiens, we're sorry but we can't answer since there are two different types of this flower — annuala and perennials. If you have annuals, they won't come back again because they complete their cycle in one year's time. If they're perennials, they'll live more than two years so all we can suggest is to replant them in the spring and find our what happens. Maybe you'll even let us know. Have patience with your impatiens.

Plain, Simple Recipes For Post-Yule Budgets

By HILDA BEASTALL

A handful of plain and simple recipes will fit most homemakers' budgets at this season.

Applesauce made from leftover Christmas fruit is welcomed as a dessert, for spooning over green salads, on homemade granola-type breakfast cereal, or with pancakes and omelets.

The cranberry sauce has similar uses. Either sauce adds a needed sharp flavor to cold ham, turkey or other fowl if these are your problem leftovers.

The third recipe is for Parkin, a dialect word believed to have originated around 1828 in Yorkshire, England. Another form of the word was "perkin."

Parkin is usually a rather thin square gingerbread, made with oatmeal and treacle. Treacle, in England, is an intensely sweet syrup made from sugar cane, much the same as corn syrup in Canada. One old recipe I found gave molasses as an alternative to corn syrup so it was chosen for my recipe as having a little more calcium and iron.

The total sugar content has been cut to about one-third of the original to suit today's needs.

Here is a modern version of an old favorite.

Parkin

½ cup soft margarine or oil
1-3 cup brown sugar and dark molasses, mixed
1 tsp. ginger powder (more if liked)
1 cup unbleached flour
½ cup wholewheat flour
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1½ cups oat flakes, ground
1 small egg
¼ cup skim milk from powder
a few ground nuts if desired

The total amount of sugar and molasses is one-third cup, so measure the sugar accordingly, and judge the molasses as you add by spoonfuls to save wasting it on the measuring cup.

Melt margarine, sugar and molasses in large saucepan and use this as mixing pan.

Meanwhile, measure the dry ingredients, except the oat flakes, into the sifter.

Grind the oat flakes; I used a small hand mouli grater which was satisfactory because it allowed a few flakes through but ground the rest to a nice coarse meal-like texture with no difficulty.

While margarine and sugar-molasses is still warm, sift in the dry ingredients. Mix with spoon, then add the ground oat flakes.

Continue mixing; add the egg as a binder and as much of the milk quantity as needed for a damp dough.

Spoon into a well greased shallow pan about 9 inches square, or its equivalent.

Bake in preheated moderate oven 177 deg. C. for about 30 minutes or until a clean knife comes out clean. Cut into squares but leave in pan until cooled. A few ground nuts can be sprinkled on top before baking if wished, but the ground oats give a most pleasant nutty flavor and texture.

The applesauce, made from holiday fruit which may not be keeping too well in the warm rooms, will be quickly made. It is suitable for spooning over the Parkins, or to use in other ways suggested at the beginning of this article. The sauce is not sweet and that is another of its merits. Quantities are easily doubled or trebled according to amount of fruit available.

Applesauce

3 medium size apples
2-3 cup cold water
1 Tbsp. sugar
1 Tbsp. soft margarine

Wash apples; remove stem and blemishes. Cut into pieces, covering with the cold water at once to prevent vitamin loss.

Cook gently until soft; press through a sieve or fine colander to remove cores and skins.

Add sugar and margarine. Stir until smooth. Use either warm or cold as desired.

Cranberries will be around for a week or so in the stores. It might be a good plan to buy for freezing. This is a good fruit for later winter use when fresh fruits become scarce and even more expensive.

Meanwhile, make cranberry sauce from the berries bought for Christmas meals. It makes a fine tonic for post holiday blues should they hit the family. Serve on the Parkins while still warm, or over a cheese and lettuce sandwich.

Cranberry Sauce

3 cups cranberries
2-3 cup cold water
½ cup sugar
2 Tbsp. soft margarine

Wash the berries; simmer in the cold water until they pop.

Press through a sieve. Keep skins to stir into yogurt for a salad dressing; or add skins to the pulp if desired.

Serve cold as suggested above.

If you have no immediate use for these simple money-saving recipes this week, file them where you can find them later in winter when the budget blues may hit even you.

An indexed file of recipes, economical yet good-tasting and attractive when made up, adds to the appeal of home-cooked meals.

Stuffed Roast Pork

14 to 16-rib crown roast of pork
Cornbread, see below
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon dried thyme
¾ teaspoon dried sage
2 medium onions, finely chopped
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 cup chicken broth

Place the roast in a shallow pan; wrap each exposed rib end with foil to prevent scorching. Roast in a 325-degree oven for 2 hours. Meanwhile crumble the Cornbread and add the salt, pepper, thyme and sage. Cook the onion in the butter until it wilts; add to cornbread mixture with the egg and broth and toss lightly.

After the pork has roasted for the 2 hours, remove it from the oven and stuff the center cavity with some of the dressing; cover the top of the dressing with foil. Return to the 325-degree oven until pork is cooked through — about 1 hour longer.

Turn the remaining dressing into an ungreased 1-quart casserole and bake it along with the pork during the last hour of roasting to offer as an extra with the meat. Before serving the roast remove the foil from the rib ends and replace with paper frills. Count on 1 or 2 chops per portion, carving the chops and dressing like a pie.

CORNBREAD: Stir together ¾ cup flour stirred to aerate before measuring, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar if desired and 1¼ cups yellow cornmeal. Add 1 egg slightly beaten, 1 cup milk and ¼ cup corn oil; beat just until smooth. Bake in an oiled 8-inch square cake pan in a preheated 425-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 25 to 30 minutes. Cool.

Better Late Than Never: Tiny's Tips on Turkey

tiny bennett

Last spring, a fellow shopper in my local supermarket said "I've cooked turkeys and other large fowl for better than 50 years but your turkey-cooking column before Christmas allowed me to put out the tastiest bird my family has enjoyed."

I'm a little late but after this year's Christmas dinner I'm going to repeat it today. But first I want to relate why this way of cooking a large turkey in the average home oven is so special.

This is something my mother taught me when she was cooking a saddle of venison. She had encased the entire saddle of a European Red Deer in a rich pastry and it took up the whole oven. "When you have meat that fills the oven," mother said, "it must be turned so that all parts meet with the hottest area of the oven — the top."

Back in those days we didn't eat turkey for Christmas Day dinner in our part of England. We enjoyed goose and a huge piece of roast beef and a roast leg of fresh pork.

My uncles and my grandfather did all the Christmas cooking and cleaning, while the women took it easy. And for me it was a sign of adulthood when the men of my mother's family allowed me to wipe dishes after Christmas dinner in 1929 when I was nine years old. But even at that age I was given the freshly killed goose to pluck. (I got covered with fleas from that bird, to everyone's amusement.)

But back to cooking a turkey.

Wild turkeys that form the original set of cooking instructions for North American cooks, are lean and streamlined birds that in their prime reach 35 to 45 pounds and yet can fly at up to 50 mph.

The turkey of today has been selectively bred to provide the maximum of breast meat, and when stuffed and tied for the oven, takes up a lot of room. That breast, the most delicate meat on our mdoern birds, is stuck up in the hottest part of the home oven — the top.

Most cookbooks will give you a formula for cooking turkey that is based upon a 325 oven at X-time according to weight. and this is a basic guide from which to start.

However, no matter what your Mom or the cookbooks tell you, it is not as simple as that.

An old friend invited us for Christmas dinner and asked if I would carve the bird for her, so I put my carving knives into the car, and when we arrived I layed them on the counter in their fitted box and said, "nobody but me touches those knives, they are only used by me." And then my hostess put the turkey in front of me, for me to carve, and even as I looked at it, I knew it was hopeless.

Each breast fell off when I touched it with my three-prong carving fork — she had cooked a 25-pound bird for 15 hours, when it would have been superb at around five hours at 325, give or take an hour or so. So to save the New Year's bird let's examine the proper way to cook your huge turkey.

TINY'S WAY ON A BIG TURKEY:

First buy a very large bird, it is more economical.

If you don't have access to a fresh bird that has been allowed to feed and roam free, buy any frozen bird that is within your price range. The quality of frozen turkeys available in most stores anywhere in Canada is quite superb.

Remember this however, if you buy a frozen bird and keep it in the freezer, it takes at least three days to defrost a big turkey in a cool place. A 15-pounder needs at least 36 hours. But, hey, leave it on its plastic overcoat through the entire defrosting period. It will keep the skin in good color and the outer parts of the bird in good condition.

Now, here's the cooking secret.

After stuffing, just before putting into the oven, turn the bird over and put it BREAST-SIDE down in your pan and roast at 325 for one hour. This brings the tougher, but to my mind tastier, dark meat of legs and thighs into the hottest part of the oven, while putting the tender breast white meat down in the cooler part.

After one hour for a big bird that has been massaged with butter and sprinkled with salt, pepper and sweet paprika, turn on one side.

This puts that dark meat on one side of the bird, away up there in the hottest part of the oven, so naturally at the end of that hour you turn the turkey over to the other side, so that dark meat on leg and thigh enjoys high heat, while that delicate white is still, after three hours, in the cooler part of the oven.

At the end of the third hour, finally turn the big bird onto its back, insert a meat thermometer into the root of the thigh where it will not touch bone, and cook until the bird is ready to serve. If the breast begins to over-color or over-crisp before the bird is fully cooked, just cover the breast with a length of cooking foil.

If your turkey is fully cooked before dinner-time, don't panic. Just take it out of the oven, let it rest for 20 minutes to set the meat and carve white and dark meat, legs and thighs onto a doubled sheet of foil. Put dressing at one end and stick it back into a 200 oven until dinner time. The meat will be hot, succulent and pre-carved for serving. And this can be a form of release for the cook who can then work on the rest of the dinner without the worry of table carving of the bird. Maybe not as pretty as TV commercials but easy on the cook.

Abortion a Worry

DEAR ABBY: I think I'm pregnant. I've made love with my boyfriend but it wasn't planned or we would have used something. I need some information on a clinic I can go to if I need an abortion.

This really scares me as I've never been to a hospital in my life. I've heard a lot of stories about girls who have had abortions. Some die and others can never have children.

Are there any free clinics? I can't raise a lot of money. Maybe a few hundred dollars. Is that enough for a safe abortion? I'm in good health except for this problem.

I can't tell my parents. It would kill them. They've already been through this with my sister, only she got married. I swore this would never happen to me.

Please answer me in the column. No way can a reply go to my home. I am 19 and was a "nice" girl before this happened.

SCARED TO DEATH

DEAR SCARED: First, go to your local Planned Parenthood Clinic. They will arrange for an examination to determine whether or not you are pregnant. If you are, they will provide expert counselling to help you make the decision that is best for you. Please write again and let me know how you are. I care.

DEAR ABBY: It's easy to understand why a married man of 45 would leave his wife for a younger woman, but how about a man that age who would leave a beautiful 36-year-old wife for an old, wrinkled grandmother of 55?

That is exactly what my brother did. He can't be in his right mind. Don't tell me he is looking for "mother substitute." Our mother is still living, and if ever a man got his share of mother love, Brother did. He was the "baby" of the family, and the only boy, born after four girls.

So please tell me what an intelligent, good-looking, professional man can see in a 55-year-old divorced retread. It's not money. She doesn't have any, and he has plenty.

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: One of life's most baffling mysteries is what people "in love" see in each other. But I suspect your brother's reasons are older than the hills and younger than springtime. (P.S. You are not your brother's keeper.)

DEAR ABBY: I applaud that clergyman who was man enough to admit that confessing his infidelity to his wife was a terrible mistake.

My husband of 15 years, whom I loved, respected and trusted implicitly, confessed such an affair to me two years ago, and our marriage will never be the same again.

That boastful confession was deadly, despite his proclaimed love for me. It was the biggest mistake he ever made.

If only one person reading this is considering such a confession to "cleanse his soul," I urge you, please, please, don't!

EMPTY

DEAR EMPTY: Your letter is full of wisdom. Thanks for sharing.

Hate to Cook? Here's Dinner Out of a Can

Hating to cook is a very popular pastime between 5 and 7 p.m. There are millions of men and women — 31 per cent to be exact, says a recent survey — who will actively seek alternatives to cooking. They find themselves making the short hop to the neighborhood burger drive-in; dropping in on those long-lost friends at dinner-time; or, heating that single can of pork and beans from the kitchen cupboard.

However, none of these are really adequate to quell the appetite and nourishingly satisfy the body.

What these "hate-to-cookers" need is an extraordinarily easy dish which limits time, utensils and the energy needed for preparation. And this is it.

Subtitled the "I Hate To Chop, Slice And Grate" recipe, this Vegetable-Beef Soup is a nutritious but delicious, easy way to prepare a meal for a family of six. Utilizing canned ingredients that are tossed into a large pot and simmered quickly, this thick and chunky soup uses a can opener and a creative sauce to marry all the flavors. It's a tomato sauce that comes with extra bits of ripe red tomato added. So, there's no need to attend to any additional chopping for this delightful and attractive extra.

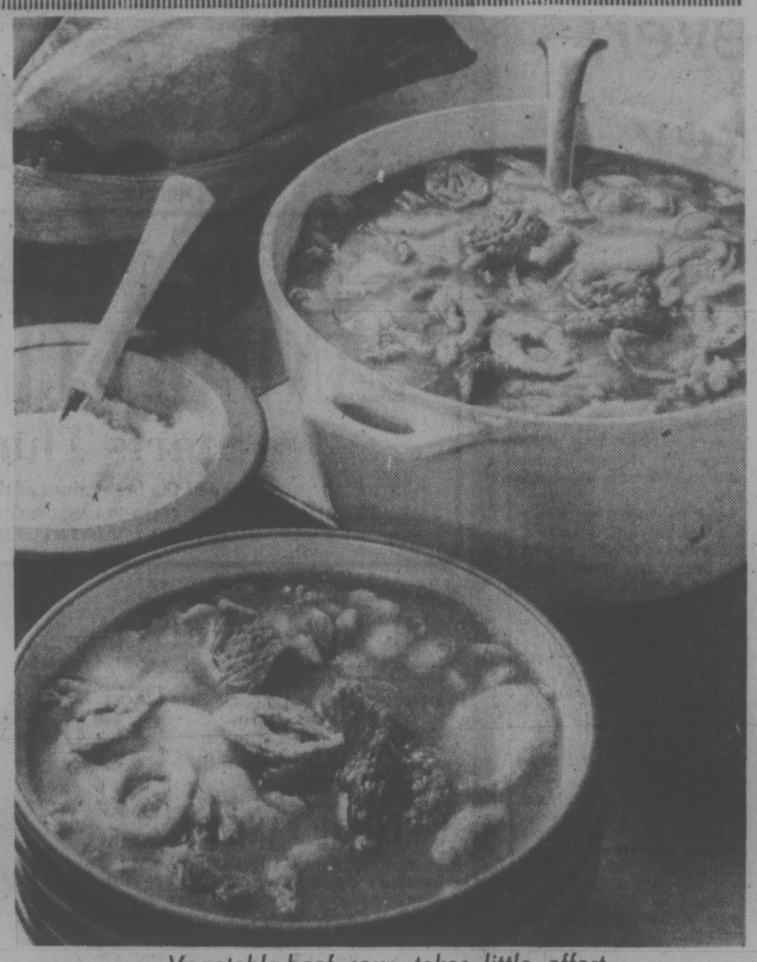
You can vary the flavor of this same dish by merely using a different flavored tomato sauce.

Any way you "sauce" it, this is the perfect recipe for those times when you absolutely hate to cook.

VEGETABLE-BEEF SOUP

- 1 (15-oz.) can Hunt's Tomato Sauce with Tomato Bits
- 1 (1-lb.) can baby lima beans, undrained
- 1 (1-lb.) can potatoes, drained and sliced
- 1 cup water
- 1 beef bouillon cube
- 1 (12-oz.) can roast beef with gravy
- 1 (3-oz.) can French fried onions

In kettle or Dutch oven, combine Hunt's Tomato Sauce with Tomato Bits, lima beans with liquid, potatoes, water and bouillon cube; simmer 15 minutes. Stir in beef and gravy and simmer gently until heated through. Just before serving, stir in half the onions. Garnish each serving with remaining onions. Makes 6 servings.



Vegetable-beef soup takes little effort

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Does a malfunctioning thyroid have any effect on the mental processes? — Mr. F.B., Wash.

Dear Mr. B.:

The thyroid gland is one of the most important hormone-producing glands in the body. The interplay between the thyroid and the other endocrine, or hormone-producing, glands virtually affects the function of every organ in the body.

Overactive thyroids can produce nervousness, palpitations, headaches, abdominal pains, restlessness and marked sweating. With such a variety of symptoms, it is obvious that mental processes thus can be affected.

Underactivity of the thyroid can produce drowsiness, mental apathy and personality changes. So here, too, it can be said that the mental processes can be affected by the thyroid gland.

The excellent tests for the study of the thyroid that are now available use radioactive isotopes. Once overactivity or underactivity of the thyroid is determined, treatment can easily keep these conditions under control.

Dear Mrs. L.:

It's a mistaken idea that women with one ovary cannot become pregnant. For years, doctors have been asked about this unfounded myth.

Actually, only one healthy ovary is needed to produce the egg and the hormones for normal pregnancy. One ovary is also sufficient to carry on a normal menstrual cycle.

I have recurring vaginal trichomona infections. Are there any new treatments that can eradicate this permanently? — Mrs. V.L.E., W. Va.

Dear Mrs. E.:

It is imperative that your husband, too, be treated. Reinfections of trichomona are now traced to both husbands and wives. Such simultaneous treatment offers the best possibility for a permanent cure.

New Uses for Vegetables

There are lovely new ways to treat fresh vegetables. The following recipe, for example, uses yams along with other good things to make a delightful stuffing for roast chicken.

ROAST CHICKEN WITH YAM STUFFING

- 3½ to 4-pound roasting chicken
- Butter or margarine
- 1 cup diced ¼-inch pared yams
- ⅔ cup chopped medium-fine onion
- ⅔ cup chopped medium-fine celery with leaves
- ¼ cup coarsely grated carrot, packed down
- 1 cup small fresh bread cubes
- ¼ cup finely chopped parsley
- ½ teaspoon poultry seasoning

Sprinkle body and neck cavities of chicken with salt and pepper. In a 10-inch skillet melt 2 tablespoons butter; add the yams, onion, celery and carrot. Cook over moderate heat, stirring often, for about 5 minutes. Add bread and cook, stirring often, about 5 minutes longer. Off heat, stir in the parsley, poultry seasoning and salt and pepper to taste.

Stuff body and neck cavities of the chicken with the mixture; close cavities by sewing with a darning needle and heavy white thread or with small skewers and white string. Hook wing tips onto back; tie legs together with string. If you like, you may rub the surface of the chicken with softened butter or margarine. Place chicken, breast side up, on a rack in a shallow baking pan. Roast in a 350-degree oven it does not have to be preheated for about 1½ hours; cut string away from legs; baste chicken with drippings in pan; continue roasting until golden-brown and tender enough to have the leg twist easily out of the thigh joint — about ½ hour longer. Makes 4 generous servings.

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The sprawling government office building taken over by Jimmy Carter's Inaugural Committee could be dubbed the "Little Pentagon."

Planning what is billed as the simple, modest and inexpensive swearing-in bash of the proleterian peanut farmer from Plains might tax the logistical talents of a four-star general.

The paid staff of the committee numbers only about 75 people — compared to the 300-or-so who planned Richard Nixon's second inaugural four years ago — but there is literally a cast of thousands getting into the act.

"There's no way we can give an exact figure of all the people involved in planning inaugural events," says Molly Dillon, co-chairperson of the committee.

"But it has to be thousands if you include everyone from Secret Service officials making security arrangements to the fulltime staff and volunteers at museums setting up special inaugural programs."

Neither can she tally up the total cash outlay for the week of celebrations that will coincide with Carter's swearing-in Jan. 20, although the committee budget is $3 million.

That might appear to be enough to finance a passable coronation in some European principality, but it is still $600,000 less than the kitty of the Nixon Inaugural Committee in 1973.

The Carter Inaugural Committee budget does not include the salaries of public employees, such as secret service agents, army bomb disposal teams, guides at museums and monuments who will be working overtime and extra policemen on hand to unravel the inauguration day traffic jams.

It's little wonder there's a cast of thousands, considering such diverse preparations as the design and installation of a solar energy stand in a park facing the White House. That's where Carter, newly installed as 39th president of the United States, will watch the tradititonal inaugural parade.

The solar energy unit, which has a $10,000 price tag, is intended to symbolize the incoming administration's concern with energy problems. If the weather's chilly, it will undoubtedly be appreciated by the new president — because the procession marching bands and floats from all 50 states is expected to last about 2½ hours.

In an economizing step, the $170,000 reviewing stand will be dismantled and shipped to Mr. Carter's native Georgia where it will be donated to a yet unnamed public park. Previously, the lumber had been sold for scrap.

Because the president-elect wants his inauguration to reflect his populist political sentiments, seating along the one-mile parade route from the Capitol to the White House will be reduced from 35,000 in 1973 to a mere 20,000. That will permit more standing room.

The number of seats at the Capitol has been reduced from 20,000 in 1973 to 17,500, again to permit more standing room for non-VIPs.

A highlight of the inaugural festivities will be six parties on the night of Jan. 20 — they will not, as in past years, be called inaugural balls. Nonetheless, it will take a considerable amount of social or political clout to get an invitation.

The inaugural committee has mailed out 400,000 invitations to Carter supporters around the country — but they are intended only as souvenirs for framing. Individual tickets are needed for the parties, and they will be sold — at $25 each — to 50,000 privileged people on a more exclusive invitation list.

The ticket price is, however, cutrate, considering that admission to the Nixon balls cost up to $1,000 a couple.

Tickets to an inauguration eve concert at the Kennedy Centre will also be $25 and again restricted. The CBS television network will pay about $1 million to televise the concert.

In deference to Carter's wishes, formal wear will be optional for people who attend the parties. In another instance of the common touch, the president-elect will wear a business suit when he is sworn-in rather than the traditional morning coat and top hat.

Accolades For Humphrey

WASHINGTON (WP) — His doctors had told him to remain very active, Hubert Humphrey was saying. "But I didn't need that recommendation." He had run, and lost, and he was philosophical about it. He would continue to be active "as long as I have the breath of life."

For Hubert Humphrey, Tuesday was a time for reflection, for receiving tributes from his political peers and the public, not for dwelling on defeat. He had entered one last race — for majority leader of the Senate — but it was not to be.

He knew it when he got up in the morning. At 8 o'clock he called his opponent, Robert Byrd of West Virginia, and said he was withdrawing from the contest. He didn't want to leave any wounds or bitterness, he told Byrd. Humphrey wanted a harmonious relationship.

A show of harmony is something the Democrats can afford these days. They control both houses of Congress and are about to occupy the White House. And a display of respect is something they owe Humphrey, who has been in the forefront of their battles for a generation. They offered both Tuesday as the 95th Congress convened.

They had met for nearly three hours behind closed doors off an ornate lobby in the Capitol. When the caucus ended, Byrd went out of his way to salute Humphrey.

He had appointed a committee to study a special post for Humphrey. Not that Humphrey needed a new office or a new assignment, Byrd quickly added: "He is, has been and always will be a national leader." Later, in the ritual surroundings of the opening of the Senate, members on both sides of the party aisle stood and gave Humphrey an ovation as he again assumed his seat. They were joined in their applause by the spectators in the galleries.

After taking his bow in the Senate, Humphrey talked about his unsuccessful effort at becoming the Senate's leader, about his health and the aftermath of his cancer operation, and about his own future.

He lost for several good reasons, he said. He had started too late, tradition was against him in that the party whip normally becomes the leader, and there was concern about his health.

"Senators are a very unusual breed," he said. "When they give their word they keep it." His colleagues had given their word to Byrd last summer. That was that.

As for himself, he was content. "Once you've gone through a little thing like I've gone through you're just glad you're here." And then there was his sense of the moment: "I like them," he said, referring to his colleagues; "they seem to like me. I've had a good life. I intend to have more of it."

Congress' Opening 'Pure Americana'

By MARY RUSSELL
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — For the last important function held in Statuary Hall in the U.S. Capitol, a July 8 Bicentennial luncheon for Britain's visiting Queen Elizabeth, a chamber group played Bach, an improvised fountain splashed and white-gloved waiters circulated among the titled British guests and congressional leaders.

Tuesday, for the opening of the 95th Congress, the scene in Statuary Hall, the site of the original chamber for the House of Representatives, was pure Americana.

More than 500 Boston-area friends of the new Speaker, Thomas (Tip) O'Neill (Dem.-Mass.), packed into folding chairs set up in the hall to watch his swearing-in on closed-circuit television. With names like Sullivan and O'Rourke and Malloy, they cheered like it was a prize fight when O'Neill was nominated and booed when his pro forma opposition, Minority Leader John Rhodes (Dem.-Ariz.) was named.

Walter Sullivan, a Cambridge City Council member and long-time friend of O'Neill, said the group was comprised of local public officials, campaign workers, campaign contributors, Massachusetts State House lobbyists, and "a lot of priests." "And Tip's bookie. Don't forget Tip's bookie," a helpful bystander yelled.

Sullivan said they weren't invited, they just decided to come because O'Neill was "a good friend and a real Irisher." They chartered three planes and paid their own way, he said. Though O'Neill was busy with official opening ceremonies and meetings all day, he would be all theirs later on in the evening when they were to throw a big reception for him at a nearby hotel.

Similar scenes were repeated all over the Hill Tuesday as constituents, friends and contributors showed up at Senate and House office parties and dozens of receptions to cheer the man they backed, particularly if he was newly elected.

Few got to see the actual swearing-in since, for instance, there are only 624 seats in the House public galleries so it was only one or two seats to a member, though O'Neill got nine. Senators did somewhat better.

The scenes in the two chambers were true to the distinctive differences between the Senate and the House. It was Grand Opera in the Senate, Grand 'Ole Opry in the House.

Poltergeist Experiences Shake Mountain Village

By ATHELIA KNIGHT
Washington Post

PEARISBURG, Va. — As Beulah Wilson recalls, she and her 9-year-old foster son had just gone to bed the night of Dec. 19 when "an orange, an apple and a roll of tape fell off a cabinet in the corner of the kitchen. I thought the cat had done it."

The 65-year-old widow said she placed those objects back on the cabinet and went back to bed. "Then a cake pan fell and silverware fell. I set them back on the cabinet and the cake pan fell again. Then, different objects began falling . . . I never saw anything fall. It would always fall away from me. But, the boy saw everything fall. He would say, 'Granny, it's going to fall.' "

As dishes shattered and large pieces of furniture toppled, Mrs. Wilson said she telephoned her son, a neighbor, and a sheriff dispatcher, all of whom later said they could hear "things crashing in the background," as the dispatcher said.

That mysterious, still unexplained disturbance, another similar incident at the same house on Dec. 20, and two other disturbances at the home of Mrs. Wilson's natural son, Donald, on Dec. 23 and 24, have shaken this Virginia mountain community of 3,500 people.

Donald Wilson, a 40-year-old state corrections officer, said he and his mother have been besieged with phone calls about the disturbances. Some people said "they want to go to the house and talk to the spirits."

Mrs. Wilson has given the child back to the welfare department. Wilson said the family did so because they have not been able to come up with any reason for the disturbance except for a theory by a University of Virginia parapsychologist, who said the child is responsible for the phenomenon.

Dr. J. G. Pratt, of the University of Virginia Medical School, said the Pearisburg incidents are typical of hundreds of documented cases in psychic phenomena. He said the child somehow possesses psychic energy, which, when released, causes objects to move.

The sheriff's office said it rejects the parapsychologist's theory. A spokesman said the sheriff's investigation is not centered on the child. "There is a logical reason and we'll find it," he said.

Mrs. Wilson said on the night of Dec. 18, her foster son unexplainedly asked her to teach him the 134th Psalm in the Bible. "He said he wanted to learn it. I read it over to him two or three times," she said.

The psalm reads in part "bless ye the Lord, all the servants of the Lord which by night stand in the House of the Lord."

"He's a good kid," said Mrs. Wilson, whose husband died in October 1975.

Neighbors, sheriffs deputies and friends of the family describe the foster son as "very polite and mannerly."

After teaching the boy the Psalm, Mrs. Wilson said they went to bed. And that's when the violent disturbance began.

Lake Cardwell, a neighbor said, "She (Mrs. Wilson) called and asked me if I felt an earthquake. I said no . . . she said something was tearing her house all to pieces. She asked me if I could hear everything over the phone. And I could hear things falling in the background."

Mrs. Cardwell's husband, Martin, described by a sheriff's deputy as "a responsible person who would have no reason to make up a story like this," said, "I saw this old sewing machine rise about three inches off the floor (at the Wilson house) and fall over . . . Everything in the kitchen was turned over except the Frigidaire, stove and washing machine. There was nobody in the house but three people. I could see the door and no one came in or went out."

A few nights later, on Dec. 23, Wilson said something unusual happened at his house. "The boy had just come into the room where my son was. My son said he went to shut the TV off and the table moved. Then an 18-inch trophy in the room fell (to the floor).

Wilson said the foster son did not touch the table, nor tip over the trophy. "I called the local church people in and we prayed," he said. He said there were no further incidents that night.

The next day, Christmas Eve, Wilson said his two children and the foster son were told they could open their presents early. He said that night the foster son went upstairs and things began falling again.

"Books (from an upstairs bookcase in the hallway) were coming down the stairs like someone was throwing them," said Wilson, who said he could see that the boy was not throwing the books. "I shouted in the name of Jesus, 'Stop it!' and took the boy outside the house," Wilson said. He said the disturbance stopped once the boy was outside.

Wilson said he called the sheriff's office and told them to come and get the boy. "I hated to do it. But my 12-year-old daughter was in hysterics and I had to protect my family," he said.

AMERICANS SICKLY IN MOSCOW CLIMATE

WASHINGTON (WP) — Tests of American diplomats and families who have served in Moscow show temporarily abnormal white blood cell counts, though no sign of serious disease, in a third of those tested, the State Department disclosed Tuesday.

The tests were made to seek possible ill effects of the Soviet microwave radiation that has been beamed at the U.S. embassy since the early 1960s. The radiation came from electronic equipment aimed at the embassy.

But the study shows "no connection" at all between the blood counts and the microwaves, the department said.

Dr. Herbert Pollack, State Department medical consultant, said he could be "absolutely sure" of this because persons heavily exposed to the microwaves have counts no different from those who never were exposed.

"We're dealing with some unknown factor in the Moscow environment," he said in an interview. "I don't know what it is, but some kind of viral infection seems most likely. It could be low-grade upper respiratory infection. A more remote possibility is some parasite, like giardia" — a drinking water organism known to cause temporary intestinal problems in visitors to Leningrad.

Toxic Mix Hurts 1,000 In Michigan

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Tests on more than 1,000 persons on Michigan farms have turned up numerous medical problems linked to a mixup that put a toxic chemical in livestock feed, contaminating meat and dairy products.

Dr. Irving Selikoff, who led a study of 1,029 persons in the Grand Rapids area last fall, said Tuesday he is "reasonably certain" medical problems reported by about a third of those studied were related to PBB contamination.

PBB, a toxic fire retardant, was accidentally mixed with cattle feed about three years ago. Thousands of farm animals died or had to be destroyed and now the chemical has tainted meat and dairy products and even is turning up in mothers' milk.

Selikoff, an environmental health expert from New York's Mt. Sinai school of medicine, said his medical investigators turned up preliminary evidence to support a variety of PBB-related complaints — including loss of memory, personality disorders, exhaustion, skin changes, breathing difficulties, muscle and joint aches, liver abnormalities and impairment of the body's disease-fighting system.

"Some people may have adverse health affects — presumably resulting from PBB," Selikoff said.

Congress Prepares Carter's Projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders of the 95th U.S. Congress are starting work on President-elect Carter's jobs program without waiting for his inauguration.

At the same time, Congress is expected to shelve President Ford's new tax-cut proposals and instead await Carter's tax plans, due to be announced later this week.

After the heavily Democratic Congress convened Tuesday, the first component of Carter's economic proposals, a $4-billion expansion of an existing public works program, was introduced. Democrats say the program might produce as many as 600,000 jobs.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill of Massachusetts said the first priority of Democrats, who now control both the legislative and executive branches after eight years of divided government, "must be to put Americans back to work."

House leaders are to gather Friday in Plains, Ga., to discuss the rest of Carter's economic package with the president-elect. That package is expected to consist of about $15 billion in economic stimulus, combining programs intended to create jobs, tax cuts to boost individual buying power and tax incentives for industry to expand plant and employment.

Meanwhile, Ford sent his own version of a tax reduction to Congress where it is almost certain to go nowhere.

Ford's proposal combined a $10-billion personal income-tax cut with reductions in corporate taxes and an increase in Social Security taxes. The package was almost the same as one Congress rejected last year.

As the Congress set itself up for business Tuesday, Senator Robert Byrd of West Virginia won his expected victory to become leader of the majority Democrats in the Senate.

O'Neill had been chosen earlier by the House Democrats and his election Tuesday was a formality.

Senate Republicans staged an upset by choosing Senator Howard Baker of Tennessee as their leader by a one-vote margin over Senator Robert Griffin of Michigan.

In the House, Representative John Rhodes of Arizona resumed his minority leadership. Representative Jim Wright of Texas already had been named majority leader by the Democrats.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Every bridge player in this world has, at one time or another, run into a "bad trump break." In these circumstances, one's defeat could frequently be attributed to circumstances beyond one's control.

In today's deal, our South declarer found himself a victim of a horrendous trump break. But through skillful play, plus the assistance of a little bit of luck, he emerged victorious.

NORTH
♠ A J 6
♡ 6 5 4 2
◇ 8 5 2
♣ K 9 6

WEST	EAST
♠ 9 5 3	♠ 8 7 4 2
♡ Q 10 9 8	♡ —
◇ K Q 10	◇ A J 7 6 3
♣ 7 4 3	♣ J 8 5 2

SOUTH
♡ A K J 7 3
♣ A Q 10

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

After West's king of diamonds had won the opening lead, he continued with the diamond queen, which East overtook with the ace. To trick three East laid down the diamond jack, South ruffing.

When declarer next played the ace of trumps, he was shocked to learn that West had been dealt all four of the outstanding trumps. And, on the face of it, it appeared that West could not be prevented from winning two trump tricks. But there was one hope, which required that South walk a tightrope. And South availed himself of it.

He next played the ace, king and queen of spades, hoping as he went along that West would follow suit to all three spade leads (if West ruffed, South would be down, since West could not be prevented from eventually making his queen of trumps, for the setting trick). When West followed suit to all three spade leads, South had overcome the first hurdle.

He then played the king, queen and ace of clubs, with his heart in his mouth. And, as in the spade suit, if West trumped any of these leads, South would go down. But, as in spades, West followed suit to all three club leads.

Declarer was now home safely. His three remaining cards were the K-J-7 of trumps. West's last three cards were the Q-10-9 of trumps.

To trick 11 South led his seven of trumps, which West had to capture. West had just become the victim of an end play, since he was compelled to lead away from his doubleton Q-10 of trumps. South's king and jack took the last two tricks.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"There was $4.97 in the piggy bank," said Charlie, "and all in pennies, eh?"

Paul nodded: "That's right, Dad. Can we have it?"

Charlie thought a moment. "Okay, the three of you can share it in the ratio of one third to one fifth to one seventh. As the oldest you get most and Larry gets least."

What would be the amounts?

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: CORN was 1549 (prime).

Convention Trade in Canada Hit

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canadian government officials say there is little they can do about a United States law that could severely reduce convention business in Canada.

The U.S. legislation would impose limits on tax deductibility of convention expenses.

U.S. officials say the legislation is not as severe, and will not have as serious an impact on Canada, as has been indicated in some presss reports from Washington.

However, the law will reduce to two the number of "foreign" conventions where expenses are tax deductible. In the past there has been no such restriction.

It will also restrict the amount that can be deducted as a business expense to the same amount that is allowed U.S. government employees when travelling to the same foreign city.

In Montreal, for example, the per diem rate will be $46.00. In Quebec City it will be $48.00.

Travel expenses to and from a convention will be tax deductible under the new U.S. law only if the convention-goer spends half the time of the trip on convention business.

It specifies that a certain number of hours of each day must be spent on convention business, in order for the expenses to be tax deductible.

U.S. government spokesmen said they had no idea how severely the new law might hit favorite convention cities such as Montreal and Toronto.

They say it was never suggested that Canada be exempted from provisions of the new law, although there have been some protest from Canadian organizations dependent on convention business.

Restrictions on tax deductibility for conventions in the U.S. will be less severe.

The allowance, for tax deduction, will be what is considered "necessary and reasonable."

Canada is not in a position to complain about the U.S. law because much stricter laws apply to Canadian organizations.

Since tax reform became effective in 1972, convention expenses have been deductible only if the meetings were held within the territorial scope of the organization.

National organizations are therefore all confined to Canada if members want their convention expenses to be tax deductible.

Postal-Worker Union Adopts A Wait-and-See Attitude

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) is maintaining its wait-and-see attitude on the question of strategy in the new year over the simmering postal automation dispute.

The 23,000-member union's last public stand was that while there would be no strike during the holiday period, "anything could happen after Jan. 1."

CUPW Vice-President Jean-Claude Parrot said in an interview Tuesday the union's nine-member executive committee would meet here this weekend to continue its analysis of the situation.

There had been no meetings between CUPW and the post office since the Dec. 15 end of talks aimed at resolving the dispute over technological change in the postal system.

A post office spokesman said the next few weeks would see increased momentum in the process of automation, with new equipment slated for Calgary, Burlington, Ont., and Laval.

There had been a slowdown in the process since late October when the dispute was sent to mediation. Early in December, mediator Noel Hall said he had failed to bring the parties together.

Parrot refused to discuss possible union strategy in the weeks ahead, but repeated CUPW President Joe Davidson's claim that the union membership was getting impatient.

Parrot said relations in the post office threaten to get "even worse" and chided Postmaster General J. J. Blais for saying things looked brighter.

When the last round of talks broke off, Blais expressed satisfaction at the way matters had gone even after Davidson said negotiations had "failed miserably."

At issue is the CUPW claim that the post office is violating a contract commitment to consult the union prior to introducing new technological change and to prevent adverse affects on workers.

Blais denies the charge and urges patience and cool-headed negotiations to make the consultation system work.

The consultation mechanism was included in the collective agreement a year ago following a bitter 42-day strike by the inside mail sorters and clerks.

The government last month refused the union's bid to have negotiations for the next contract moved up to January so that the major points in the dispute could be tackled in that context.

The contract expires in June and the government claims it would be illegal to re-open talks for a new collective agreement earlier than two months before the expiry date as provided by law.

TV Blackout Sparks Riot

EDMONTON (CP) — A riot by 35 prisoners at the Calgary Correctional Centre Monday night apparently resulted when the prisoners were refused permission to watch the late movie, Alberta Solicitor-General Roy Farran said Tuesday.

The riot, confined to the dormitory, was quickly brought under control by the tactical squad shortly before midnight.

Farran said following a further investigation of the incident a decision will be made whether to lay criminal charges.

Light fixtures, mattresses and windows were damaged as a result of the riot.

Farran said there were also complaints about the food in the institution. The prisoners said too much ham and turkey was served during the festive season.

CATTLE FUND SET

OTTAWA (CP) — The establishment of a long-awaited cow-calf stabilization program, at an estimated cost of $70 million for 1977, was announced Tuesday by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan.

Eligibility for the federally funded program will be open to all beef cow-calf producers with herds of more than five cows, up to a total of 100 cows.

Producers now covered by provincial plans for 1977 may receive up to 50 per cent of the federal stabilization payments with the province supplementing that amount up to 100 per cent of the total federal level.

Cost Estimates Reduced for Pipe

OTTAWA (FP) — Foothills Pipe Line Yukon Ltd. of Calgary has reduced its cost estimates for the Yukon and Saskatchewan portions of the Alcan Highway northern gas pipeline project by $86.9-million to $1.37 billion.

The cost revisions reflect route changes in the Yukon that added 3.8 miles to the original 508.8 miles of pipeline paralleling the Alcan Highway. They also reflect an increase in the pipe size from 36 inches to 42 inches along the Saskatchewan connections between Alberta and the U.S. border, according to evidence prepared for the National Energy Board's northern pipeline hearings.

Under a revised schedule, construction would start in the winter of 1978-79 on the first of seven sections, would have four more sections completed by the spring of 1980.

Que. Still Balks on Air Test

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal transport department officials have once again appealed to Quebec Air traffic controllers to co-operate in simulated testing of bilingual air-ground communications for instrument flight rules.

Testing which should have begun early last August is still being held up because of "a little problem — the Association Des Gens de l'Air du Quebec," department spokesman Andre Dumas told a news conference Tuesday.

The Association, which represents French-speaking civil aviation professionals, refuses to participate in the testing until Ottawa introduces bilingual air-ground communications for visual flight rules at three Quebec airports — St. Hubert, Dorval and Mirabel.

The three facilities are the only remaining airports in the province operating in English only. Bilingual air-ground communications are currently in force at the seven other airports used for civil aviation.

Dumas said his department has sent individual letters to Quebec controllers, inviting them to meet with federal officials Jan. 6-11 to discuss the testing program.

But the department's action has been criticized by the president of the Gens de l'Air, Roger Demers.

In a telephone interview from Quebec City, Demers said his association was "very perturbed" by the government's attempt to go over the association's head.

The only thing the association wants from the government before co-operationg with simulated testing is some proof that it is serious about applying French, Demers said.

English-speaking pilots struck Quebec air space illegally for nine days last June because they maintained that bilingual air-ground communications were unsafe.

U.S. Blocks Cancer Victim From Seeing His Children

EDMONTON (CP) — An Edmonton man with a history of cancr said Tuesday he wants to go back to the United States to visit his children — but is finding the border mysteriously blocked.

"I'd just like to see my kids in case something happens," said the 37-year-old, who had one cancerous kidney removed in August and now is experiencing medical difficulties with the other one.

Mr. White (not his real name), a Canadian who served in the U.S. armed forces from 1961 to 1963, wants to visit his two sons, Gerald, 12, and Kevin, 11, in Cannon Falls, Minn. He said he hasn't seen either of them "since they were babies."

He said American border authorities have repeatedly denied him entry into the U.S. — without explanation.

"They just said they wouldn't allow me into the States," said Mr. White, who was told by Minneapolis immigration officials Sunday that he would be immediately returned to Canada if he took a planned flight there.

"They didn't explain why. Apparently my name is on something down there and I don't know what it is," he said.

Mr. White, who became a resident alien in the U.S. when he went there in 1960, said he can't think of a reason why he should be barred from the States.

"I don't deal in narcotics, I'm not a saboteur," said Mr. White, who said he was eligible for citizenship in the U.S. and received an honorable discharge from the army.

He said the only thing in his past which might possibly have some bearing on the case is a theft conviction he received at age 16 when he stole his father's rifle. He was sentenced to 30 days in a Regina jail.

U.S. immigration laws prevent entry of undesirable aliens for a variety of reasons, including drug addiction, vagrancy, prostitution and conviction on criminal charges involving "moral turpitude."

GARDENING

Gardens Hold Something for All

Gardening in Victoria has a wide variety of meanings to many people — in fact a different meaning to everyone who indulges in the art, indoors or out.

The meaning is defined as being what each person gets out of the activity. To the younger and healthy ones, it is the glow from physical achievement resulting in an immaculate garden admired by all.

But fortunately in the gardening world there are special levels of excellence attainable by those with less than perfect health. This is the lucky aspect of gardening. Each participant may select a personal goal and, according to the ability, enjoy every pathway leading to the attainment.

A philosophy develops that makes it clear that not only the goal itself must be reached, but that every step along any side path is worth enjoying for what it reveals.

This may seem a long winded way of saying that all who enjoy any part of the vast art of gardening should be allowed to pursue their hobby in their own way, at their own level.

The gardener who finds pleasure in the New Year's Day blooming of a camellia in a small patio garden will likely be looking forward to some further gardening activity by spring, hoping to bring about another phenomenon. It doesn't matter too much that the precocious blooms resulted from the type of weather past and present. The important point is that it is the plant in that gardener's own little garden that is behaving so wonderfully.

A similar excitement is experienced by the indoor gardener who plants a gift bulb of Hippeastrum (commonly called amaryllis) on Christmas Day and during a very few weeks watches the miracle of thick stem arising topped by enormous lily-like flowers.

I have talked to people who are quite frankly more interested in the soil of the garden than in the ultimate flowering of the shrubs and trees.

The miracle of nature to these folks is the activity going on in the soil whether it is permitted to grow ornamental plants or not. The micro-organisms continue to thrive if the soil receives moisture and exchange of air. They know too that plant growth of any kind is essential to keep the cycle of soil-making going.

One bird watcher quite frankly tells me that wild grasses must be allowed in the garden if birds are to be expected.

This is the ideal way to attract wild creatures since there will naturally occur the wide variety of life needed for the sustenance of birds. They will remain in such an area without being dependant on human handouts. Only when unusually harsh weather arrives do they need assistance to survive. This is an area of gardening appealing to the more unorthodox gardeners.

Terrariums, dish gardens, the smallest and most limited gardens — each has its purpose and its importance.

Whatever sphere of gardening may interest you in this new year, never let familiarity dull your sense of wonder at the miracles of nature — especially the small ones.

Way Cleared For Housing

Two large tracts of land were declared development areas by Saanich council on Tuesday, paving the way for apartment and home construction at Royal Oak and Ten Mile Point.

It was made clear, however, that the Ten Mile Point project could not go ahead until services are improved.

And the proposal for Royal Oak could be amended.

Broadmead Farms Ltd. is planning about 82 single-family homes and 124 multiple units, consisting of townhouses and apartments on 70-acre Prevost Hill in Ten Mile Point.

The Isherwood family has applied for rezoning of their property in the Royal Oak Inn area to build a 480-unit apartment complex.

Ald. John Mika said input from residents on both projects is vital.

Stressing services are lacking in the Ten Mile Point area, municipal planner Gil Laurenson said, "It will be very difficult to negotiate a land-use contract until such time as the deficiencies have been resolved."

Mayor Ed Lum observed, "With it being a development area we can talk to the developer and the residents and demand that certain things be done."

On the Isherwood proposal, Lum said rezoning of the 46 acres behind the inn is a down-zoning because the property has been zoned for hotel, motel and other commercial use for about 15 years.

"If the developer wanted, he could build highrise skyscrapers. In other words, we're trying to down-zone," Lum said.

Another proposal for rezoning in the North Quadra area was referred back to the lands, planning and housing committee.

Laurenson's proposal for the area includes setting a minimum of 7,200 square feet for lots.

Ald. Fred Severson, noting Saanich's allowance of 6,000 square feet minimum lots in some areas had not been successful, said: "This may set a pattern, this may be a criteria. It's a start, I think it's a good one."

Cowichan Man Named By Saanich

Saanich's new municipal clerk is Robert Sharp, 34, administrator of the Cowichan Valley Region District.

He succeeds Gordon Hayward, who is retiring March 31 because of ill health after serving 37 years with the municipality.

Sharp has given one month's notice to the Cowichan Valley Region District.

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum said today Sharp will assume his new duties as soon as possible. Sharp, who has held the up-Island post since June, formerly worked in Powell River.

Lum said Sharp applied for the position of personnel officer "about a year or so ago".

He said when Hayward tendered his resignation, the municipality decided Sharp would be the best replacement.

Curfew Set For Suspect

Judge William Ostler set an 11 p.m. curfew today for a 19-year-old man charged with nine counts of breaking and entering in Greater Victoria on Sunday.

Timothy Bruce Bent, 729 Porter, was arrested by Saanich police Tuesday night after they checked a car at the Gorge Shopping Centre.

Three juveniles were also in the vehicle.

NIMBLE NADIA LEADS AP POLL

NEW YORK (AP) — Nadia Comaneci, the acrobatic sprite from Romania who won gold and glory at the Montreal Olympics, was named Tuesday as Female Athlete of the Year by The Associated Press.

Comaneci, virtually unknown outside of gymnastic circles, burst onto the international scene in Montreal with a perfect score of 10 on the uneven parallel bars — the first perfect score in Olympic gymnastics history — on the first day of competition. Before the week was out, she had accumulated six more 10s, three gold medals and, through the magic of television, massive worldwide exposure.

Comaneci was a runaway winner in balloting for the Female Athlete award. She compiled 342 of 605 votes cast by a countrywide U.S. panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

Dorothy Hamill, gold medalist in figure skating at the Winter Olympics in Innsbruck, Austria, was runnerup with 106 votes. Tennis star Chris Evert was third with 80 votes, speedskater Sheila Young was fourth with 32, East German swimmer Kornelia Ender fifth with 13, golfer Judy Rankin sixth with nine and West German skier Rosi Mittermaier seventh with seven.

Comaneci, a 14-year-old dynamo at Montreal, won individual gold medals on the uneven bars and the balance beam and captured the gold in the all-around event — symbolic of the world's premier female gymnast.

Virtually fearless, she whipped her 90-pound body around the bars with grace and daring and executed flips and somersaults on the hazardous beam with remarkable poise. She dazzled the judges into unprecedented scores and thrilled standing-room only crowds at the Montreal Forum.

Comaneci will receive the Babe Didrikson Zaharias trophy as AP Female Athlete of the Year. The trophy was donated in memory of the woman who won six AP titles between 1932 and 1954. She died of cancer in 1956. The award will be presented at the Tampa, Fla., Sports Club's annual dinner in the spring.

English Driver Eyes Bid To Crash Sound Barrier

HONG KONG (Reuter) — A 31-year-old Englishman hopes to become the fastest man on earth by driving his car through the sound barrier.

European Formula 5000 motor-racing champion David Purley says he will make the attempt in a jet-powered car next August at Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah. But to do so he needs to attract sufficient sponsorhip.

The present world land-speed record has been held by American Gary Gabelich for six years, since he achieved nearly 630 miles an hour at Bonneville in 1970. Purley will be aiming to take his 36-foot-long, five-ton cylindrial rocket car through the sound barrier, at around 760 miles an hour and beyond.

"Once the car passes through the sound barrier, the drag (friction) coefficient drops off sharply, so there's no telling how fast it will be able to go — maybe 1,000 miles an hour," he said.

The car was developed by David Gossling, a 36-year-old designer with the Hawker Siddeley Company's aerospace program, who has been working on the project for some 18 months.

It will be powered either by two booster jets developed for a British missile program or by a Viper jet engine used in fighter aircraft.

The bodywork will be of steel and aluminum and the car will ride on four grooved steel wheels.

Purley will control it from inside a safety capsule.

"The capsule is a sort of reinforced egg," he explained. "If there was any structural deformation of the car, the capsule would be thrown out and roll, maybe for a couple of miles with the driver inside. Rolling at that sort of speed, he would obviously lose consciousness, but should avoid injury."

Safe within the capsule, Parley will be able to keep the car in firm contact with the road by means of two small wings mounted near the nose, which could be adjusted much like the flaps of an aircraft, if a lift indicator on the panel showed any tendency for the car's nose to rise.

When Purley takes the car on to the 12-mile salt flats at Bonneville, he will make timed runs over one mile in each direction. The car will need three miles to accelerate up to the timed mile leaving eight miles for a parachute deceleration, with the car able to rely on brakes only when it has slowed to 200 miles an hour.

One problem will be that as soon as Purley cuts off the power, the car will decelerate violently.

"As soon as the driver cuts the power, the negative G-force on him will be like hitting a brick wall. To counter this, I'll be wearing a pressurized G-suit, such as an astronaut or jet pilot wears, but of course, I'd be bound to black out for a few seconds."

Purley says blacking out might be the least of his problems.

"Nobody has any way of knowing what effect it might have on the car.

"We'd expect that when it goes through the sound barrier there would be a period of strong vibration, but once it's through it should ride in a sort of vacuum and leave the noise and the vibration behind. But until we've done it, we just don't know what's going to happen."

To finance the venture, Purley needs to find about $150,000 if the attempt is to be made this year.

"As well as the cost of building the car, we also have to transport it and a team of 15 engineers and backup staff to Bonneville for up to a month, to allow sufficient time for testing and to get the right weather conditions," he said.

Purley has found several major British firms willing to back the attempt, but mostly with supplies of materials and equipment.

Even if the cash is not forthcoming in time, Purley will keep trying with a view to making the attempt in 1978.

In addition to the speed-record attempt, Purley is also planning to return to Formula I racing in his own car this season. His Grand Prix car, powered by the Ford V-8 engine, should be ready and Purley hopes to give it its first race at the South African Grand Prix in Kyalami in March.

Hawks, Turner Winners

By The Associated Press

A crowd of 9,194, the second largest of the National Basketball Association season in Atlanta, showed up Tuesday night and cheered both the Hawks and their colorful new owner. And if Turner's goal is to sell tickets, the Hawks' spirited 113-109 upset of Denver Nuggets certainly did not hurt.

The victory snapped an eight-game Hawks losing streak. They are 1-0 under the new management team of majority owner Turner and general manager and president Mike Storen. Turner and Storen took over the club Monday, one day after baseball commissioner Kuhn suspended Turner from operating the National League Atlanta Braves for what he termed "conduct detrimental to baseball" in his pursuit of then-free agent Gary Matthews.

Elsewhere in the NBA Tuesday night, Golden State Warriors whipped New York Knicks 120-110, Milwaukee Bucks routed Phoenix Suns 139-111, Chicago Bulls trimmed New York Nets 88-80 and Portland Trail Blazers overwhelmed Boston Celtics 128-84.

Atlanta went ahead to stay with a nine-point burst in the third period that established an 80-72 lead. Denver, whose 24-11 record is the best in the NBA, twice pulled within two points before Lou Hudson's 22-foot jumper with 1:27 left made it 111-107 and clinched the victory.

Dan Issel led Denver with 29 points and Thompson scored 23.

Rick Barry scored a season-high 38 points and Jamaal Wilkes added 23 as the Warriors snapped New York's three-game winning streak and built a three-game string of their own.

The Bulls broke open a sloppy game with a 16-6 burst in the third quarter. Mickey Johnson was Chicago's high scorer with 20 points.

Portland outscored Boston 21-1 in a five-minute span of the second half in taking command. Boston had trailed only 58-52 at halftime, but managed just 32 points in the entire second half. Lionel Hollins led Portland's balanced scoring with 21 points.

Milwaukee moved ahead 77-75 at halftime and rolled up its highest point total of the season. Junior Bridgeman led the way with 38 points.

Books and Skis Don't Mix

MONTREAL (CP) — George Athans says he is looking for new fields to conquer after retiring from the competitive water-skiing career that helped put Canada on the map in the sport.

"The first and most inportant reason for getting out is that I established goals for myself a long time ago and I've reached them all," Athans, the first skier to win consecutive world titles, said in an interview.

"I don't think I'm retiring from my involvement in the sport, but I am going to retire from active competition."

The 24-year-old native of Kelowna, B.C., was Canadian champion for more than a decade. In that time he won two world titles, in 1971 and 1973, as well as the United States Masters crown.

Athans now is a student at Montreal's McGill University and has a wife and daughter.

"While the sport allows me to cover my expenses, which are in the neighborhood of $20,000 a year, it's hard for me to ski and study and accomplish the other things I'd like to do with my life."

A series of injuries to his left knee have also restricted his activity. He first injured the knee in a jumping competition in California in early 1975.

With training and rehabilitation, he was able to ski in the Ontario-Quebec Challenge Cup, where he reinjured the knee, keeping him out of the 1975 World Championships in London.

Last June, he tore ligaments in the knee the day before he was to take part in the Canadian Superstars competition, a television sports feature.

GEORGE ATHANS

"Going into Superstars I was more motivated than at any other time in my life," Athans recalled. "I probably wanted to prove to everyone that water-skiing involved more than just dragging behind a boat with a girl hanging on your shoulders on a Sunday afternoon."

Athans is studying management, marketing and advertising courses at McGill to supplement the degree he earned at Sir George Williams University here.

He once was interested in the promotion of athletes and last year served as manager for his brother Greg, the U.S. freestyle snoe-skiing champion.

Athans often is asked if he thinks he chose the wrong sport, and he admits that some considerations might have led him elsewhere.

"From a financial standpoint, water-skiing certainly hasn't supplied the secure base that tennis, hockey or some of the other major sports could.

"But you have to look at a sport in its totality. Water-skiing gave me a great education travelling around the world."

Saanich Snipers Blast 96 Shots

MRS. SHANE JOINS WHITE SOX CREW

CHICAGO (AP) — Mary Shane doesn't have ideal qualifications to become a major league baseball broadcaster.

She got her first radio job just 16 months ago. Before that she was a high school history teacher. She's not a former player and she's only 28.

But the Milwaukee native also has a quiet self-confidence, knowledge of the game, the luck of being in the right place at the right time and a stack of reviews from approving listeners.

As a result, she has become perhaps the first woman hired as a play-by-play broadcaster in major league baseball history. Mrs. Shane will be the female voice of Chicago White Sox's four-person television-radio team this year.

"Play-by-play is what I've dreamed of doing since I've been a little kid watching the Milwaukee Braves," she says.

"It really is a dream come true."

She was there as a sports reporter for a Milwaukee radio station and was talking to Harry Caray, head of Chicago's broadcasting crew.

"He said, 'Hey, would you like to do some play-by-play?" warning. He just gave me a microphone."

She appeared on three White Sox broadcasts last season and the listeners took it from there. She's slated for a minimum of 20 home broadcasts next season.

Johnstone Gets Berth

MILL BAY — Jack Johnstone skipped his rink to an 11-8 decision over Ken Sawyer late Tuesday night to capture the final Mill Bay Curling club berth in the South Island men's Consols playdowns scheduled Jan. 14-16 at Playland in Victoria.

Gary Graham won the first berth before Christmas.

Four rinks from the south and four from the north will meet here in the Vancouver Island final Jan. 21-23.

Unitas Eyes Colt Job

BALTIMORE (AP) — John Unitas, who became a living legend as quarterback for Baltimore Colts, would like to become general manager of the National Football League team — if the job is available.

Robert Irsay, the Colt's owner, was quoted in the Baltimore News American on Tuesday that Unitas had called him last month and expressed an interest in the job now held by Joe Thomas.

Thomas, who sold Unitas to San Diego Chargers in 1973, has been given permission by Irsay to talk with other clubs about a job.

"John called me a couple weeks ago and said he'd be interested if anything turned up," Irsay said.

Aussies Near Win

At close of play on the second last day, Pakistan was in an almost hopeless position at 128 for seven, chasing a total of 500 to win.

Seahorse Proves Thames Clean-Up Working

LONDON (Reuter) — The finding of a seahorse in the Thames recently is the biggest news to hit London's majestic river since the invention of the toilet in the 19th century.

For the seahorse, and the 86 species of fish now found in the inner Thames, running 25 miles east from London Bridge towards the sea, is the happy climax of one of the world's most successful anti-pollution operations.

In 1957 this bit of river was full of sewage, industrial waste and detergents, but virtually no fish. Only eels, which can come to the top to breathe, survived there.

The cleanup epic is told in a new book, The Thames Transformed: London's River and Its Waterfowl (Andre Deutsch, publisher), by ornithologists Jeffrey Harrison and Peter Grant.

Being bird-watchers, they are most excited that the river now is attracting a winter population of 10,000 waterfowl and 12,000 waders. In the 1950s only a few mallard ducks and mute swans lived on the inner Thames, eating grain spilled from warehouse docks.

Londoners have been throwing their garbage into the Thames since pre-Roman times, but only in the 19th century did the stuff begin to hang around for a long time, stinking and killing fish.

Then the growing population, increased use of the newly invented toilet, more industrial pollution and the draining of London's marshlands to build docks all combined to turn the river black with refuse.

Untreated sewage was pumped into the river, which is tidal to a point above London and full of narrow side-channels below. Effluent was trapped in the channels and washed back and forth by tides.

In 1856, "The Year of the Big Stink," the Thames was so putrid that sheets soaked in disinfectants were hung over the windows of Parliament. The government finally began to consider sewage treatment plants.

From then until the Second World War, the history of the inner Thames relates a contest between increasing sewage plants and increasing sewage, with the sewage slowly winning.

In the Battle of Britain many of these plants were knocked out of action by bombs. The German air raids killed the river. It remained lifeless until the early 1960s when a government committee, after a decade of research, reported on ways to revive it.

None of the committee's suggestions involved scientific detergent buildup, which once wizardry, just an integrated, carefully planned program using available technology.

The 190 sewage works operating around London before the war were consolidated into 12 by 1970. These used the latest filtration equipment, turning liquid waste into almost pure water.

Solid waste was rendered almost sterile and dumped by special ships far out in the estuary.

Industrial pollution, which accounted for 12 per cent of the problem as opposed to about 80 per cent caused by sewage, was strictly controlled, and bio-degradable detergents helped to ease the detergent buildup, which once covered the decks of small ships with foam.

Pollution drives away fish and birds largely because it rids water of oxygen. A measurement called the "oxygen sag," which records the oxygen levels at their lowest point in the year, has been taken in the inner Thames since 1893.

Until the early 1960s, this figure was decreasing. Then it began to improve. The measurement for 1975 showed 21 per cent dissolved oxygen, compared with 11 per cent for 1974.

When the cleanup began city officials were hoping for a 10-per-cent yearly average by the year 1980. The quick surpassing of the target has led scientists to dream of a regular salmon migration up the river, which will require a reading of 30 per cent.

The Thames is not entirely out of danger. New riverside power stations are planned which will use the river water as a coolant, raising the temperature of the river. This cuts oxygen absorption and increases polluting reactions in the water.

The alternative would be the building of huge cooling towers, which would create a kind of visual pollution on London's skyline.

Mrs. Spencer Rites Held

A private service was held in McCall Bros. Family Chapel today for Lillian Watts Spencer of 1663 Rockland, who had a substantial financial interest in the Victoria Daily Times before it was sold to the late Max Bell of Calgary in the early fifties.

Mrs. Spencer, who died Monday, was the widow of Will Spencer who operated Spencer's department store here before the family sold its retail holdings to the T. Eaton Co.

She is survived by a daughter, Myfanwy Pavelic of Sidney, one granddaughter Tessa Pavelic, also of Sidney, and one sister Mrs. Lael Edwards of Victoria.

Province Welfare Bum: Young

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The no-punches-pulled onslaught occupied the closing minutes of Young's formal address at the inaugural city council meeting of 1977.

By contrast with the remainder of his speech, which was the usual recitation of policies and objectives, coupled with thanks to retiring aldermen and others, it amounted to an abusive tirade.

Young accused the government of:

—"Severely dislocating" the city's economy by "gross over-development" of office space, which has saddled the private sector with an estimated 400,000 square feet of unrented space;

—Being largely responsible for the present 10 per cent unemployment rate in Victoria, by first aggressively expanding the civil service and then cutting back on hirings;

—A combination of policies which have "crippled" the city's tourist industry overnight;

—And persistently refusing to pay its fair share of property taxes on provincial holdings in Victoria, which he said results in a loss to the city of up to $1.4 million a year.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, asked today about Young's scathing attack, commented:

Curtis said he does not want to comment further on Young's speech until he reads it himself.

Young began by saying he was aware of the risks in "biting the hand that feeds."

"But when that hand is slowly starving you to death

SWEEPING PROPOSAL

Litter offenders in the city of Victoria may find themselves sentenced to cleaning the streets, if a suggestion aired by Mayor Mike Young on Tuesday is adopted by city council.

To curb the litter problem, Young proposed a bylaw with a "substantial fiscal penalty" which also offers offenders the alternative of spending "two or three hours with a broom cleaning up our city streets."

Young added: "This would provide a strong deterrent factor and yet provide a penalty that was within the means of all to pay, one way or the other."

In his address at council's inaugural meeting, the mayor also suggested that council reconsider its present refuse burning bylaw.

"Conditions in certain areas of the city this fall, caused by the prolonged atmospheric thermal inversion, created a very unpleasant environment and this could be substantially remedied by reducing the number of burning days to not more than four per week," he said.

Make-Work Jobs Made Permanent

By JULIET O'NEILL
Canadian Press

OTTAWA — Manpower officials say job creation programs are taking a turn for permanency that reflects government pessimism about unemployment.

As the year begins, more than 700,000 Canadians, including about 90,000 in B.C., are out of work and senior manpower policy planners say they do not expect that to change markedly.

"What we're saying now is that things are not going to get very good very quickly, so we have to get something a little more solid going," Jack Manion, associate deputy minister for manpower, said in an interview.

The department regards as more solid than in the past its five-year plan to create year-round make-work programs and to use money sayed from changes in the unemployment insurance plan for employment experiments. In addition, the department is reuniting its manpower and unemployment insurance offices, staff and administration.

One proposed unemployment insurance fund experiment is a work-sharing program where companies would reduce the work week to split available work among all employees rather than lay off some of them when production must be cut back.

The government would compensate the employee for reduced wages with unemployment insurance payments.

"In theory everybody gains but in practice everybody is cautious," Manion said of the business community's response to the proposal so far.

Duncan Campbell, head of manpower's strategic planning and research division, said work-sharing funds would not be meant for seasonal layoffs that are predictable but for temporary economic downturns."

Most of the manpower department's budget to counter unemployment will go into makework programs, as it has in the past. Three-quarters of the $358 million to be spent in 1977 will go into four make-work progreams, one of them to replace the Local Initiatives Program a winter job program that cost $200 million this winter.

The major new job program is Canada Works, under which established organizations, partnerships or corporations can get up to $180,000 a year to create new jobs in areas with high seasonal or reigonal jobless rates.

GALLUP POLL PUTS TORIES 14% AHEAD

The poll, taken last month, gives the Conservative party 47 per cent of popular support compared with 33 per cent for Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberals. The New Democratic party has 16 per cent and others have four per cent.

Undecided voters, 35 per cent, were eliminated in making the calculations.

Sixth Tanker Crisis On U.S. East Coast

Times News Services

Barge crews today dumped millions of gallons of oil from the grounded Liberian tanker Universe Leader in an effort to refloat the vessel and keep its 21 million-gallon cargo from polluting the Delaware River.

It was the sixth Liberian flag tanker accident in or near U.S. waters since mid-December. The 824-foot ship went aground Tuesday night trying to avoid a collision with another vessel.

The U.S. coast guard said no oil was spilled as crews worked to pump enough oil out of the tanker so it could be refloated at high tide.

Out in the Atlantic, another oil tanker saga was unfolding as coast goard aircraft resumed a search for the 642-foot Panamanian tanker Grand Zenith, missing off New England for six days with a crew of 38 and a cargo of 8.2 million gallons of industrial fuel oil.

In the Delaware River grounding, the Universe Leader was stuck in the mud about 20 miles down river from Marcus Hook where another Liberian-registered tanker, the Olympic Games, ran aground Dec. 27 and spilled 133,500 gallons of oil.

Meanwhile, New York state has filed a $10.3-million claim against the owners of an oil barge that spilled more than 300,000 gallons of oil into the St. Lawrence River last June.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court here Tuesday, charges the Oswego Barge Corp. with negligence, trespass, creating a public nuisance and violating environmental-conservation laws.

Meanwhile, a Seattle pilot who took a liquified gas tanker into Rosario Strait in darkness contrary to regulations faces a civil action from the U.S. Coast Guard in Seattle.

The decision to launch a civil case against Dewery Soriano, of Seattle, results from an investigation of the incident by the 13th Coast Guard district.

A spokesman said today the maximum penalty for Soriano's action is $10,000.

BRAZIL COFFEE PROFITS SOAR

Times News Services

Brazilian coffee growers earned record profits last year and apparently are unconcerned over North American attempts to fight high prices with a boycott.

Sources told UPI Tuesday the year's gross sales will be in excess of $2.3 billion, more than double the $900 million gross export sales of 1975 and $1 billion more than Brazil's previous record of $1.243 billion in 1973.

Meanwhile, New York congressman Fred Richmond, interviewed Tuesday night on a Public Broadcasting Service program said that certain Latin American countries, including Brazil, have taken advantage of natural disasters to impose unfair export taxes ranging upwards of 80 cents a pound on their coffee.

Richmond, a member of the House of Representatives agriculture committee, said the export taxes were supposed to help growers hard hit by frost in Brazil, and earthquakes and floods in other parts of Latin America.

But he doubted whether the growers were receiving full benefit from the taxes.

Richmond's assertion that some countries are co-operating in pushing up prices was disputed by George Boecklin of the National Coffee Association.

"I know of no instance where coffee-growing countries are conspiring together on prices," he said.

Boecklin said the situation was caused by a supply shortage.

DAM BEEF BY CANCEL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., 81-per-cent owned by the British Columbia government, has filed an appeal against last month's decision to build the Revelstoke dam.

Provincial water rights controller Howard deBeck on Dec. 3 granted the application of crown-owned B.C. Hydro for a water licence to build a $1.2 billion Hydro electric project near Rvelstoke.

Roy Murphy, a Canadian Cellulose spokesman, said Tuesday the company is appealing the granting of this licence for several reasons, including loss of forest land and possible problems with log transportation.

The water rights branch in Victoria said appeals have been received from Canadian Cellulose and the B.C. Wildlife Federation.

Murphy said the Canadian Cellulose appeal was filed Dec. 21.

Ottawa Pours Cold Water On Coast Guard Sauna Claim

A Coast Guard spokesman in Ottawa today denied a Campbell River man's charge that search and rescue funds have been used to build a sauna and gymnasium in an Ottawa ministry of transport building.

The spokesman said he is "not aware" of the alleged project and added the MOT does not own its office building but rents space.

The denial came after Dr. Robert Somerville said in an interview he had heard "by way of the grapevine" the cash had been funnelled off to build the facilities in an MOT building which houses the coast guard division.

The money Somerville was referring to is the $30 to $40 million recently announced by Ottawa to beef up search and rescue facilities on the east and west coast.

Somerville, a coast guard agent, said today facilities on the west coast are a "first-class mess."

For that reason, and because he has been ignored by Prime Minister Trudeau and other cabinet ministers, he is launching a last-ditch campaign to elicit public support.

He said he has fired off letters to the House of Commons outlining the expenditure of money on the sauna and gymnasium as well as the needs on the west coast.

He is also asking all boat owners in B.C. and all those who have been rescued to write their MPs, demanding more money and better rescue equipment and facilities.

Somerville said it is time "to get people off their butts" and make them realize how they are being shafted in terms of transportation and coast guard facilities.

As one example, he said that Ottawa has agreed, as part of the recent increase in funds, to put two more helicopters on the east coast.

These are expensive machines to run and they will eat up a large portion of the $30 or $40 million that is alloted, he said.

What infuriates rescue people in B.C., he added, is that B.C. won't get another helicopter for another two years or more.

Asked why he feels the Trudeau government has so far ignored pleas for more help, he said it is because the Liberals know they are in trouble.

"Therefore they just don't give a damn about the west coast. They are going to go where the votes are, to the east coast."

Somerville said statistics do not back up the attention east coast search and rescue facilities get from Ottawa in comparison with the assistance given the west coast.

There were 2,335 marine incidents handled out of Victoria last year but only 831 out of Halifax, he said.

UNIONS DEMAND NORTHLAND AID

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Pacific Coast Martime Council of Unions has sent a telebram to Prime Minister Trudeau demanding that the federal subsidy to Northland Navigation be re-instituted and that Federal Transport Minister Otto Lang be fired.

Council secretary-treasurer Tom McGrath said Tuesday that the telegram says Lang's decision to have a commission look into West Coast shipping is a sham and a hoax. The commission would be meaningless and a waste of money, he added.

"Why would you have a commission to prove you're wrong, and if you prove the government wrong what recourse have the people in the coastal communities against the government through lack of service to June or July when a commission may possibly have an answer?" asked McGrath.

He said the council has no intention of appearing before the commission unless the subsidy to Northland is re-instituted.

Among the members of the council are the International Woodworkers of America, the major forst union in B.C., the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the Seafarers International Union of Canada.

Halt Realty Profiteering—Alderman

Oak Bay alderman Doug Watts today said he will seek provincial legislation to prevent real estate agents from buying and selling houses for their own profit.

He said during periods of real estate boom there are numerous reports of agents using inside information to buy up bargain houses and selling them for a big profit within a few weeks.

Watts said bargains in the real estate market should be available to everyone and not just to people in the industry.

"The duty of an agent is to get the best price for your property. If you offer the property at the bargain price of $50,000 and he buys it and resells it weeks later for $55,000, he has not acted faithfully as your agent."

Rather than buy the property, the agent should advise the client the house is being offered at too low a price, Watts said.

There is not much buying by agents at the moment but only because the market is slow, Watts said.

"Now is the time to bring in some restriction so it can be applied during the next boom. Any bargain should be available to all purchasers."

He said he wants to collect information on restrictions in other countries—"I have heard that this type of buying by agents is not permitted in Australia"—and will also look into regulations governing agents in other occupations, such as stock brokerage offices.

Watts said he will seek a complete ban on any type of speculative purchase by real estate agents in British Columbia.

At present, any member of the real estate industry can buy and sell on his own behalf although when he makes his offer he is required to state that he is the buyer. He is also required to state the reason he is buying the property.

(Stock brokers can buy shares using their inside information, if they have any, but if there are two identical bids for one block of shares, one by a broker and one by a member of the public, the public offer takes precedence and the broker must wait for another block of shares to become available at that price or offer a higher price.)

- 'No Need' for More Apartments in Single-Family Areas
- 'Encouraging' But Not Reassuring, Says Fairfield Spokesman

Young Ready to Block Bulldozer Binge

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If Victoria city council heeds the advice of Mayor Mike Young, the bulldozers' wrecking spree is over in the city's residential neighborhoods.

Young told aldermen, in his address at Tuesday's inaugural council meeting, that he sees "no need or desire" for further apartment construction in existing single-family residential areas.

He said he intends to oppose further rezoning of such areas during the coming year, and urged council to do likewise.

The mayor's comments received a cautious welcome from Syd Langhelt, president of the Fairfield Community Association, who at the same meeting was appointed to a three-year term on the city's Advisory Planning Commission.

Langhelt, a prominent figure in the organized neighborhood fight against the demolition of houses for apartment development, said today Young's statement was "encouraging" but not entirely reassuring.

He pointed out that in recent months the Fairfield Community Association has asked council to down-zone certain apartment-zoned areas, but council has not acted on the requests.

If council virtually freezes other districts zoned for single-family use, these will come under "terrific pressure," he noted.

Langhelt said he was looking forward to his APC assignment, and called the appointment a recognition of the fact that neighborhood groups have an important role in the community.

He added, wryly, that the other APC appointment announced Tuesday — that of developer Harvey Pinch — provided a "neat balance."

Young noted in his speech that in the past five years a "record total" of 8,500 residential Units have been constructed, nearly all of them in the form of apartment and condominium construction.

"Serious questions must be asked whether this only achieves governmental objectives rather than genuine, popular requirements," he said.

In 1973 the city had established a new, lower density apartment category (R3L) which was intended to reduce the density of those areas already zoned for high-density apartments.

Unfortunately, he said, this new zone has been used mainly to up-zone existing single-family areas rather than encourage the development "of more modest scale apartments and buildings in the then-existing apartment zones."

After urging council to resist this trend, Young said the city can continue to encourage apartment development in and around the central core area.

He also suggested that the R3L category be reviewed in an effort to reduce the size of apartment - condominium projects "to a more personal and human scale," and that council consider other concepts such as zero lot lines and smaller lots for individual family dwellings.

"In my opinion this certainly makes more sense than the destruction and displacement of existing, relatively low-cost family housing through the construction of massive apartment and condominium developments," he said.

Elsewhere in his inaugural speech, Young said the city should support and encourage the CPR in its tentative proposal to expand the Empress Hotel's Crystal Ballroom, providing convention facilities for up to 1,500 visitors.

If the idea becomes a firmer plan, he said, the city could relieve parking pressure on the convention centre by building a parking structure on land immediately north of the old Crystal Garden.

It might be possible to include roof-top bowling greens in the parking structure, giving the city's many bowlers year-round facilities and enabling the city to host major lawn bowling tournaments.

As a second phase of the development, Young suggested the city might consider using the Crystal Garden site to erect a civic auditorium and concert hall seating up to 2,500 people, "to serve major conventions and large-scale cultural performances."

Lum Slams Merger Talk, CRD's Clout

Times Staff

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum came out strongly against amalgamation, the growing powers of the Capital Regional District and the "archaic, paternalistic and restrictive" Municipal Act in his inaugural speech Tuesday.

He said proponents of amalgamation are misinformed when they claim amalgamation saves money.

"On the economics of amalgamation, it is easy to be drawn into the numbers game. I don't intend to fall into the trap," he said.

See pages 11 and 20 for more inaugural council meeting stories.

"Unfortunately, such savings exist only in the minds of the uninformed. The fact is, no major city has amalgamated in North America in the last 50 years and saved money."

Lum said the growing number of ratepayers' associations and other concerned citizens' organizations is a clear indication that people are determined to have more input into the decision-making processes which affect their lives. "Amalgamation would make this far more difficult" he said.

"The basic question is, then, are the residents of the Capital Regional District prepared to forego this greater measure of self-determination in return for a large, monolithic and impersonal bureaucracy? This is the real question, all else is frivolous talk."

Lum said the CRD's primary role should be centred on intermunicipal co-operation and co-ordinated action on problems common to all municipalities.

"In recent years I have become very concerned that the regional district is becoming more and more another level of government, a trend which, in my opinion, should be reversed," he said.

Lum called for a task force, representing both provincial and municipal government, to review the Municipal Act.

"The Municipal Act, in its present form, is archaic, paternalistic and restrictive," he said. "It delegates a great deal of responsibility to those elected to municipal office without the necessary authority and flexibility to carry out those responsibilities.

"I would like to see a joint task force appointed, representative of both levels of government, to conduct a thorough review of the act."

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis today agreed that the Municipal Act is "desperately in need of revision."

But the job, he said, would cost about $100,000 and could take 18 months.

"It's desperately in need of revision, of a putting together of all the amendments that have been tacked on over the years, but it's an expensive and lengthy process," Curtis said.

"It's on my list of tasks," he said, but could not promise a starting date for the job.

As mayor of Saanich for nine years, Curtis worked with the act and said that while he recognized its shortcomings, he does not find it paternalistic.

"It's bad in terms of telling you what you want to know. I even have trouble with the index.

"But I would take issue with paternalistic as an adjective. The province has to exercise some control over local governments."

Lum, noting the provincial premiers had negotiated a new cost-sharing formula with the federal government in December, said he hoped the provincial government will do the same with municipalities.

"At least they were afforded the opportunity to negotiate. We, on the other hand, have little input into the final decision-making process," he said.

It Was 'Hanky Pranky'

It turned out to be just a prank but police were not, repeat not, amused.

It all started when Saanich police were called late Tuesday by an attendant at the Westview service station at Trans-Canada and Tillicum.

The attendant reported a car had stopped for gas.

In the back seat, he said, was what looked like a body draped in a sheet with hands tied behind its back.

Two other persons in the car were making "menacing gestures" to the "body", the attendant said.

The car sped off north on the highway but the attendant got the licence number.

Saanich police raced to the scene and when efforts to locate the car failed, alerted up-Island police detachments.

Shortly after midnight Duncan RCMP spotted the vehicle on Marshall Road. The "body" turned out to be a third man who was part of the prank.

"Aw, officer, we were just horsing around," the driver said. "We wanted to give the attendant a scare."

No charges are contemplated, police said regrettably.

Co-Op Drops Home Project

The Mount Stephen Co-Operative Housing Association has abandoned plans to build low-income housing on 4.5 acres at Mount Stephen and Ryan in Victoria.

Rafuse said that ever since the group began working on the project in March, 1974, "we've had one run-around after another."

In an "open letter" to Housing Minister Hugh Curtis on Tuesday, Rafuse accused the housing ministry of "buck-passing," and said many families would already be living in the complex if the government had moved quicker.

The association had been invited to submit a proposal on the project by Dec. 31 but Rafuse said government strictures prevented the group's participation.

He said the ministry requires any non-profit co-op engaged in a project to limit expenses to $45,000 a unit, thereby qualifying for a Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. martgage.

"I challenge any builder to put up a complex at $45,000 a unit on the site," he said.

Rafuse said the provincial government, which owns the land, had originally agreed to sell it for $242,000 but now has it listed at $624,000.

He said underground servicing costs will run about $400,000, and per-unit cost of constructing a 61-unit complex would be about $35,000. The minimum finished cost of each unit would be about $52,000.

To qualify for CMHC mortgaging the group would have to redesign the entire project — and no one was prepared to do that, he said.

Four-Lane Contract Awarded

A Surrey construction firm has been awarded the $3.2 million contract to widen the Trans-Canada Highway between the Town and Country shopping centre and the Thetis Lake overpass.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday H. B. Construction Ltd. will start work soon.

Fraser said the total cost is estimated at about $7.2 million, including the cost of acquiring right-of-way land.

The project should employ about 75 people and is expected to be finished by late 1978.

The densely-congested stretch of highway, which carried more than 1,500 vehicles per hour in peak commuting periods, will be widened to four lanes.

Associated work will include the realignment of access ramps at the Thetis Lake overpass and blocking off access from some minor feeder roads.

Inmate Fled Across Line

A 30-year-old inmate at William Head released Dec. 31 on a two-day temporary pass has probably fled to the United States, police said today.

Genovese, an American citizen, was sentenced in August, 1974, to 10 years, one month and 11 days for armed robbery, possession of a prohibited weapon and possession of marijuana. He was due for reelase July 20, 1981.

Colwood RCMP said Genovese was let out of prison at 8 a.m. Dec. 31 and was to return at 11 p.m. the next day. It was the 12th time he had received a temporary pass since transferred to William Head.

He spent the day and night at an apartment at 906 St. Charles loaned by a friend.

Police said on Jan. 1, an anonymous caller phoned to say Genovese had no intention of returning.

Delta police were alerted and checked out travellers on the B.C. Ferries. For two days RCMP checked out passengers at Victoria airport and ferry departure points on southern Vancouver Island.

It Started with Cleaning the Chimney

PERCY TEMPLEMAN
. . . doesn't bother now

max low

Okay, the new year is only five days old and I bet you've broken them already.

All those resolutions weren't meant to last, were they? That's if you even bothered to make any. And most people I asked didn't.

"I never make them!" said the first guy I approached. And another said:

"Resolutions? None thanks, except maybe to have more fun."

One woman was quite candid:

"I don't make any because I always break 'em all, anyway. Well, isn't that about the size of it? You see, that way I can say I'm really a good girl because I didn't break any of my New Year's resolutions."

That is about the size of it.

Most people don't make resolutions because they know they won't keep them. It would be an exercise in futility. Many don't even give the habit of resolving to turn over a new leaf much thought any more.

One pretty young miss seemed quite baffled by my question.

"Now let's see, resolutions? They're when you're trying to improve something about yourself, aren't they? Well, I wasn't going to make any this year!"

She's already perfect, no doubt.

Even though you may no longer indulge in the futile art of resolving, have you ever wondered when and where the custom of making resolutions originated?

Well, as far as I can make out (with the help of a couple of reference books), the early English took over many of the Roman New Year's Day customs and later added one of their own — cleaning the chimneys on New Year's Day. This was supposed to bring good luck to the household during the coming year.

With the passage of time, cleaning the chimney became "cleaning the slate" or in other words making resolutions to correct faults and bad habits, resolving to make the new year better.

My Shawnigan neighbor Percy Templeman, who will be 93 in August and who first went out to the lake in 1924 long before there were electricity or telephones out there and the "roads" were mere logging tracks, admits he "doesn't bother" making resolutions any more. But both he and his daughter Evelyn Barr feel the custom has lost a lot of meaning.

"Few people would stick to any resolutions they make nowadays, so they don't make them," says Mrs. Barr, who is in her 70s. "Things are far too easy now and people don't have any will-power. These people who expect so much and grumble about everything should have been around in the 1930s to see what had to be done just to stay alive."

She's right.

Still, foolish as ever, I decided to make a few resolutions that I knew, too, probably wouldn't last.

I resolved to TRY not to yell at my kids but instead to talk to them calmly with reason. That one went by the board on Jan. 1 — at 7 a.m.!

I resolved also to write more than one letter a year to my brother and sister who live at opposite ends of the earth (only because they have both promised to do the same). And I resolved not to write my columns too long in 1677 as doing this in 1975 and 1976 never failed to incur the wrath of the City Editor.

Anyway, it looks like being a good year as my wife's resolution is to talk as kindly to me as she does to the dogs . . .

Most popular by far among the resolutions made by those who haven't given up the custom is also, by far, the most likely to be broken — to give up smoking. It's something many would just love to do but can't manage it. Again the old will-power.

From the others I spoke to there were vows to lose weight and to get on with jobs they have been putting off. Like the guy who has finally resolved to make a start on building that sundeck with timber that's been lying there for six months.

But my favorite came from an attractive lady I know. And I'm sure she won't mind if I borrow it.

"I've decided I've got to be more demonstrative in my love toward my husband," she told me. "Really. I mean, I'm not always very affectionate. Many of us aren't.

"And you stop and think what's life all about if you don't have loving relationships.

She smiled attractively.

"I see th importance of this all around me with my grandchildren. So I've decided this year it's important to be more loving to my husband."

What a lovely one. More love.

Steady Job Has Ended for Carl Coates

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Back in 1937 the only thing Carl Coates wanted was a steady job.

It took him three years but he finally got it—with the Victoria fire department.

Coates, who for the past 10 years has been the department's deputy chief, retired New Year's Eve.

In an interview at his home at 2662 Avebury, Coates said he was pleased to be a part of the force that has grown from a handful of men to its present strength of 103 over the 37 years he was on the job.

He served under eight chiefs and attended so many fires, he said, he couldn't begin to count them all.

One of the last of the "smoke-eaters," he said in the early days old-timers disdained using air masks while fighting fires and regarded anyone who did as something of a "weak sister."

"Fortunately the ideas have changed," said Coates who is 60. "Now firefighters are forbidden to enter a burning building without wearing a mask."

He noted other changes through the years, most important being the increased emphasis on fire prevention and firefighter training. Coates played a large role in developing both programs on the force.

Born in Duncan, he was raised in Victoria and grew up in the Fernwood district less than a mile from his present home. He never used his Christian names Robert John McCall. His parents nicknamed him Call and "through some misunderstanding" was later tagged Carl.

He left school in 1934 at the height of the depression and found work with Victoria grocer Jim Adams.

"The only reason I got the job was because I could play a bit of basketball," he said.

He played three years with the Dominoes, the Dominion champions, and later coached junior teams.

Coates

In 1937 he applied to be a fireman and one afternoon in early 1940 received a call for an interview.

"I couldn't figure out why the chief—Alec Munro—wanted to see me. I'd forgotten all about the application."

He has had his fair share of close shaves, he has been cut and bruised, overcome by smoke—all hazards of the occupation—but none of the injuries was serious. "I guess I was lucky."

He was appointed lieutenant in 1962 and promoted to deputy chief in February, 1967, succeeding the current chief Eric Simmons.

"One of the things that made the job easier for me in dealing with all segments of the public was not only a natural knowledge of the local geography, but also that I knew such a large circle of people. That made all the difference," he said.

Coates married in 1939 and he and his wife Jocelyn had three children, Ian, 31, Ross, 25 and Miriam, 22. Jocelyn died in 1970 and five years later he married his second wife, Jean.

In retirement Coates plans "to do all the things I never had time to do before."

LIBRARY BOARD EYES NEW SITE

A parcel of privately-owned land on Blanshard between Pandora and Comorant has been recommended by the Greater Victoria Library Board for a new central library.

In a letter to the four core municipalities, the board asked that the site be considered for construction of a joint central library and arts centre.

Esquimalt Mayor Arthur Young told council the letter was "really only for information," and it was tabled.

Oak Bay Council received and filed the letter, while Saanich referred it to its finance committee.

Victoria Mayor Michael Young in his inaugural address, suggested the facility go on the site owned by the provincial government at Blanshard and Courtney Streets currently being developed as a parking building.

Ald. Shirley Dowell, Oak Bay representative on the library board, said the idea of the arts centre has not yet been formally approved.

It is still largely the idea of one member of the board, she said.

'I'll Scatter Your Brains,' Youth Claims Accused Told Him

A 16-year-old youth told a county court jury Tuesday that Daniel Robert O'Brien, 35, of 1145 Mason, told him "I'll scatter your brains across the street" unless he paid him $150.

Malcolm Berge, who used to live here but is now in Langley, said he was taken to O'Brien's house Aug. 8 by Daniel White.

O'Brien is accused of attempting to extort $150 from Berge.

Berge, 15 at the time, said he had earlier received a note at the group foster house where he lived saying "get hold of us before we get hold of you."

While walking on Pandora Avenue with two friends, White drove up with a girl in the car and he left his friends and went with them to a Mason Street house.

He said O'Brien and another man were in the house and O'Brien asked if he got the note.

Berge said O'Brien told him he needed the $150 to pay a lawyer because police had caught him with some illegal firearms.

Two days later, he said he telephoned O'Brien from the Victoria police station and O'Brien told him to meet him at the Beacon Drive-In restaurant, but he didn't meet O'Brien.

Cross-examined by defence counsel Mike Hutchison, Berge agreed he hadn't known O'Brien before Aug. 8 but he understood from White that seven pounds of marijuana he and two friends had stolen from a house next door to O'Brien belonged to O'Brien.

He said White met him in Metchosin in July and told him people were looking for him and that he owed $800 to pay back the people who owned the marijuana.

Berge said "I don't know" when asked why O'Brien would say get in touch with him in a note when he hadn't met him before and didn't know him.

Berge agreed that White said at O'Brien's house that O'Brien "wouldn't have to dirty his hands" and he would do it, in reference to the remark about "scattering your brains."

But he denied Hutchinson's suggestion that the only threats made at the house came from White and not O'Brien.

And Doyle, who used to live at the same foster house as Berge, said two men came to the door in July asking for Berge and she identified one of them as O'Brien.

She said Berge wasn't home and O'Brien wrote a message saying "Malcolm get hold of us before we get hold of you" and signed it "Dan" and the other man put on a swastika sign.

She said she didn't know the second man but it wasn't Daniel White, whom she knew.

Foster house parent Cliff House said Doyle came to him with a note July 26 which said "Malcolm get hold of us before we get hold of you." There were initials on the bottom which he couldn't recall and a swastika sign.

He saw two men getting into a car outside the house and wrote down the licence number and called police.

House said Berge wouldn't talk to him about the note when he returned home but on Aug. 10 was "very agitated" and "apprehensive" and they went to city police.

Sgt. John Maybin said Berge and House saw him Aug. 10 and an investigation was launched. That evening, he said O'Brien was taken into custody.

He said Berge made two phone calls from the police station, the first to White and the second to a person "I believe to be" O'Brien. The second call was tape recorded.

He said "that's correct" when asked if White was arrested on the same charge as O'Brien, a couple of days later.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 30-year-old Victoria man was denied bail Tuesday in Victoria provincial court on two charges of theft under $200.

Milne, represented by Peter Freeman, faced an additional charge of possession of stolen property, some narcotics and controlled drugs.

Judge William Ostler, on a request from Freeman, remanded Milne until Friday for election and bail hearing.

Trial for James Michael Pogue, 33, of 95 Wellington, on a Dec. 1 charge of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking was set for April 25.

Pogue chose trial by judge alone Tuesday.

Ostler sentenced a 30-year-old man who pleaded guilty to his third conviction of possession of narcotics to seven days in jail.

Robert Ronaldson, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to a Dec. 8 charge of possession of marijuana as well as a Dec. 20 charge of failing to appear at the Victoria city police station for fingerprinting and was given seven-day, concurrent sentences.

Three 17-year-olds, facing a breaking and entering with intent charge in connection with a Dec. 21 break-in at Arbutus junior high, 2306 Edgelow, had their trial date set for April 19.

Dwight James Anglehart, 4989 Georgia Park Terrace; Martin Rayner, 4085 Ebony Terrace; and Richard Charles Velay, 2164 Ferndale, elected to be tried by judge without jury.

Two character witnesses, called by defence lawyer Clifford Watt in support of a request for discharge for a former Victoria man now living in Vancouver, failed to persuade Ostler to grant the discharge.

Watt argued that a conviction would jeopardize Vandale's chance for promotion as a grain inspector but Ostler sided with Crown counsel Robert Mulligan that this case was no different from any other shoplifting case and levied a $100 fine.

A 20-year-old Canadian Forces man was fined $50 and ordered to take an impaired driver's course after pleading guilty to breach of probation.

Court was told Thomas Parsons was ordered Aug. 12 by Judge Blake Allan to take the impaired driver's course and failed to do so. He was fined $450 and was also placed on six months' probation at the time on an impaired driving conviction.

Ostler tacked on a further six-month probation and again ordered Parsons to take the course.

JUNE FERRIES FOR BURRARD

The province's newest ferry system — the Burrard Inlet passenger service — will start up in June, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis has announced.

The $45.9 million service will operate between Vancouver and the North Shore.

Two Victoria-built, 400-passenger capacity vessels, the Burrard Beaver and the Burrard Otter, will cross the inlet at eight-minute intervals to tie in with bus services on both sides.
